War head project canceled

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon canceled Friday a $175-million program that would have provided a big new nuclear warhead for the nation's land-based strategic missiles.

Defense Department sources said the program's cancellation re-emphasized the current trend toward developing multiple warheads which can be carried aloft by one missile, then directed individually at widely separated targets.

The department said it has informed members of Congress that development work on the Mark 17 re-entry vehicle, or warhead, has been terminated after $45 million in expenditures.

Funds originally earmarked for Mark 17 work will go instead into the Mark 11 single warhead programs.

The Mark 11 warheads go atop the Air Force's Minuteman 2, an ICBM targeted against points in Soviet Russia and Red China.

Other re-entry systems soon will give the later Minuteman 3 missiles multiple warhead packages.

The Pentagon was extremely cautious in discussing the matter after issuing a three-paragraph statement of the cancellation.

The statement said AVCO Corp. of Wilmington, Mass., had received a contract for research, development and production of the Mark 17 in April 1966. Had the warhead gone into production, the program would have involved the spending of $175 million through June 1970.

But, the Pentagon said, the entire re-entry vehicle requirements for Minuteman missiles were re-evaluated recently and it was decided to cancel the Mark 17 before additional research and development or heavy production costs were incurred.

No savings

A Pentagon spokesman said the Defense Department is claiming no savings in the cancellation since the funds not already spent probably will be going into other missile work. Exactly how much Mark 17 money would be spent, or when, in other warhead programs was not announced.

AVCO also produces the Mark 11 warhead series.

Industry publications describe the Mark 17 as a seven-foot-long, 30-inch-thick warhead which would have made a high velocity penetration of the atmosphere over enemy territory and, because of its "low radar cross-section," would have been difficult to detect by antimissile radars.

Although nobody would say so, the cancellation was the first apparent sign of a reported major Pentagon effort to stretch out and pare down costs. The goal would be to avoid asking Congress for more money.

Four draw sentences for anti-Soviet work

MOSCOW (AP)—Four Soviet intellectuals active in Moscow's literary underground were convicted Friday of anti-Soviet activities and sentenced to terms of up to seven years imprisonment.

Their five-day trial was closed to all but a half-dozen relatives and was unreported by Soviet news media. The mother of one defendant told waiting friends that all were found guilty as charged.

The defendants had served almost a year in a Moscow jail awaiting trial. Three of them are expected to be sent this weekend to Polna, a labor camp on the Volga notorious among Soviet liberal intellectuals. The fourth, sentenced to only one year, will be released Jan. 20, sources close to the defense said.

Break police lines

Friends of the defendants broke through a police line outside the courthouse after the trial to present red carnations to the four defense attorneys.

"Thank you so much, you did all you could," one girl told them.

The court handed down sentences precisely as demanded by the prosecution:

—Seven years for Yuri Galanskov, 28, also charged with illegal money changing.

—Five years for Alexander Ginzburg, 31, compiler of "The White Book on the Sinyavsky-Daniel Affair," a collection of documents from a literary trial two years ago published only abroad.

—Two years for poet Alexei Dobrovolsky, 29, the only defendant to plead guilty and testify against the others.

—One year for Vera Lashkova, 21, a typist who helped prepare manuscripts for Ginzburg and Galanskov.

In the crowd awaiting the end of the trial in the late afternoon darkness were Pavel M. Litvinov, grandson of a former Soviet foreign minister, and Mrs. Yuli M. Daniel, wife of the imprisoned satirist whose trial was documented in Ginzburg's book.

Litvinov and Mrs. Daniel earlier in the day denounced the trial as a "cold mockery, unthinkable in the 20th century."

They said in a statement handed to Western correspondents "there can be no pretense... that there is any justice or legality about it (the trial)."

The crowd of about 50 supporters, who had kept a vigil off and on throughout the trial, was held back by 25 uniformed police and harassed by about 50 young men serving as volunteer plainclothesmen. A secret police photographer snapped pictures of the scene with a flash camera.

Yoder said "I feel very strongly that the public ought to know just what can happen—the unanticipated results of this"—taking LSD.

Six become blind after sun staring

WASHINGTON (AP)—Six young college men suffered total and permanent blindness by staring at the sun while under the influence of the drug LSD, it was learned Friday.

The six, all juniors at a western Pennsylvania college that officials decline to name, lost their sight after they took the hallucinatory drug together last spring.

Norman M. Yoder, commissioner of the Office of the Blind in the Pennsylvania State Welfare Department, said the retinal areas of the youths' eyes were destroyed.

Federal officials questioned about the case said it is the first they have heard of in which total blindness resulted. The only similar case officials knew of was one reported last May in which four students at the University of California at Santa Barbara suffered permanent loss of their reading vision by staring at the sun after taking LSD.

Yoder said in a telephone interview from Harrisburg that the six Pennsylvania students all had taken LSD at least once before. He said they went in the morning to a grassy area in a woodland about half a mile from the college and took the drug there. Then, he said, they all lay on their backs in the grass "and were not consciously looking at the sun."

The youths were found at the scene, blind and helpless, the afternoon of the same day by fellow students who knew of the "trip" plans.

Yoder said the youths didn't even realize they were staring at the sun "until they came out of the trance," but that they had come to their senses when the other students arrived.

The afflicted students have since been receiving rehabilitation services of the Pennsylvania Welfare Department.

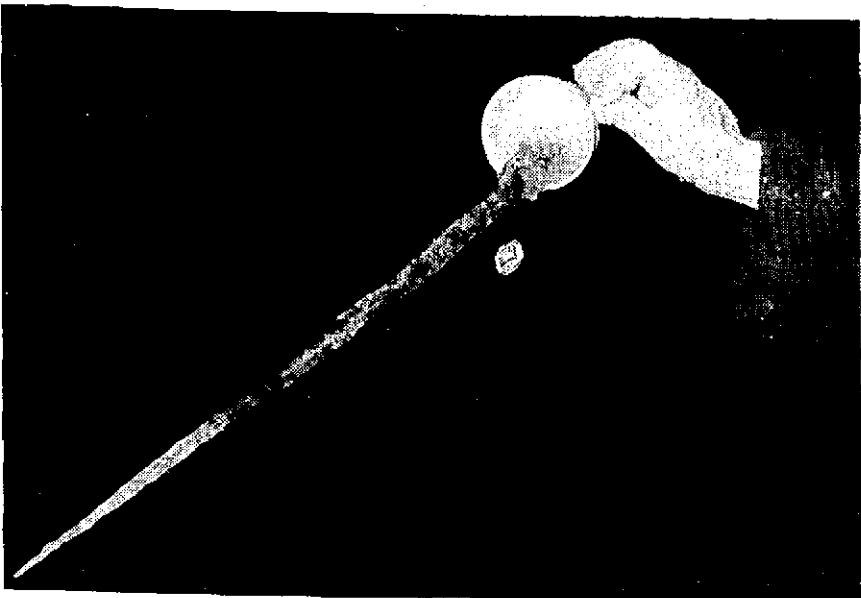

"It's a real tragedy," Yoder said, "when kids can ruin their lives this way. And the parents are asking: 'How can something like this happen?'"

Yoder told the Department of Welfare of the case in a letter last Nov. 13. Department spokesmen said no attempt has been made to determine whether other cases have occurred elsewhere in the country.

Dr. Leon Jacobs, deputy assistant secretary of welfare for scientific affairs, commented that the case is "another evidence of how disastrous the effects of LSD may be." He said he hopes the "demonstration of what a terrible thing happened to them may keep other kids away from it."

To combat what federal health officials consider a serious national problem, especially among students, the government is trying to confiscate supplies of the drug.

Yoder said "I feel very strongly that the public ought to know just what can happen—the unanticipated results of this"—taking LSD.

Hot tea not hot enough

Even a cup of hot tea doesn't have a chance in this weather. As one can plainly see, the tea froze immediately to an icicle when thrown to the frigid breezes. Actually, it's all a gag, as the Pocono Record's Rod MacLeod used a cup, tea bag and an icicle for props.

Rising temperatures to reach state today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pennsylvanians continued to shiver as the mercury plunged to below zero in many parts of the state Friday. Similar temperatures were expected today.

Lopez in Sullivan County reported an unofficial -32 Friday morning. The lowest official temperatures reported were -24 at St. Marys and -23 at Phillipsburg.

Some residents in Reading were really shivering. Parts of the center city still were without steam heat as a result of a breakdown at the Reading Steam Heat & Power Co. Workers there hoped to restore service early next week.

Coal freezes

In the Wilkes-Barre area water left on coal after it was washed at the breakers froze in the trucks, making delivery difficult.

Coal dealers around the state were running extra shifts to handle the calls for coal. At Tamaqua coal truck drivers reported being backed up as long as five hours to load.

Buses late

School buses at Schuylkill Haven were an hour late getting started Friday morning because of the cold.

Ice continued to build up in the Allegheny River, with an ice gorge causing near flooding conditions at Parker.

Friday's cold weather was caused by a high pressure system. The Weather Bureau said it should move off to the east. Temperatures are expected to moderate some in the southwest with overnight lows there about 15 above.

The northeast part of the state was expected to have another rough night, with the Weather Bureau expecting lows of -15 there.

The mercury was expected to rise into the 20s in most parts of the state today.

In Burlington, Vt., Friday's noon temperature of 1 above marked the first time in almost five days that Burlington had a temperature above zero. The spell broke the old subzero mark of 87 consecutive hours set in 1887.

(Local weather on pages 3, 9)

Much of harassed eastern North Carolina remained locked in the winter's worst sleet and freezing rain storm and some of that weather moved into the western part.

Thousands of homes in North Carolina's rural and urban areas lacked electricity to pump water and supply heat for the second straight day Friday. But service was gradually being restored in such hard hit cities as Southern Pines, Goldsboro, Sanford, Greenville, Dunn and Charlotte.

It was a record-breaking frosty morning from New England to the mid-Atlantic States. Albany, N.Y., had 26 below zero a mark that equaled its all-time low set Jan. 31, 1948.

It was even colder in Ray Brook, N.Y., where the natives were iced in by a reading of -39.5 as well as ice fog. The ice fog was formed by tiny particles of ice suspended in the air. It was -28 in Massena, N.Y., but that was balmy compared with Wanakena, N.Y., where it was -45 for the second day in a row.

A narrow band of precipitation—sandwiched between two large high pressure systems—stretched from Minnesota to eastern Texas.

Scattered freezing rain and drizzle also extended eastward to the Carolinas.

Bowles said Cambodia seeks "a stronger and better equipped" International Control Commission — ICC — to help safeguard her neutrality.

Bowles claims Cambodia talks success

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Chester Bowles returned Friday from his five-day mission to Phnom Penh and said his talks with Prince Norodom Sihanouk made "an important step" toward preventing the Vietnam war from spreading to neutral Cambodia.

"We said we have no intention of crossing the border under any circumstances," Bowles told newsmen. "The question of hot pursuit did not come up."

He referred to the possibility that U.S. forces might enter Cambodia in hot pursuit of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops using Cambodia's border areas as a sanctuary.

"The whole issue was how he and we could work and cooperate together to prevent Cambodia's neutrality from being infringed upon by anybody," Bowles said.

A joint communique expressed U.S. respect for Cambodia's "sovereignty and territorial integrity" but contained no specific guarantee that U.S. forces would not cross the border in pursuit of Communist forces.

In Washington, experts on the situation noted the communique's wording left open the option of hot pursuit.

Bowles said Cambodia seeks "a stronger and better equipped" International Control Commission — ICC — to help safeguard her neutrality.

Rock bands hasten beat to old age

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Teens-Boppers dancing to the pounding beat of rock bands are blasting their eardrums into old age, a University of Florida researcher said Friday.

In front of the bandstand at "The Place," a Gainesville club for teen-agers, his team found the noise measured 120 decibels—as loud as the Saturn 5 moon rocket measured from the press site at Cape Kennedy.

Dr. Kenneth C. Pollock said his associates at the audiology laboratory were 40 feet outside the club before the sound dropped below 90 decibels, the point which the American Medical Association says is the threshold above which damage is caused.

Loss of hearing

In ten youngsters, all about 14, examined before and after a three-hour dance session, Pollock found temporary loss of hearing acuity ranging from 1½ decibels to 35 decibels. All had ringing in their ears.

"Thirty-five decibels means they hear normal conversation as a whisper, like stuffing your fingertips into your ears," Pollock said.

"Even though most of the losses were mild, we consider them significant," he said.

"One girl told me why they like it loud," Pollock explained. "She said, 'It embalmes you. It has to be that loud so that it gets inside you. Otherwise it isn't any good.'"

About 50 feet away from the peak of 120 decibels at the bandstand, Pollock said, the team found sound from 106 to 110 decibels.

By the time they are 25 years old, the youngsters will have the problems of the aged as sounds of consonants become hard to hear.

"It's like elderly persons who complain, 'Everybody mumbles. Nobody talks plain anymore,'" Pollock said.

Pollock said the harsh sound tires the youngsters far more than just the dancing.

Kasperak able to sit in chair

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—Mike Kasperak, who received a transplanted heart Saturday night, has been able to sit in a chair for 15 minutes but is still on the critical list, Stanford Medical Center reported Friday.

A spokesman said his blood pressure, pulse and temperature were normal, but liver and kidney functions were abnormal. He said use of an artificial kidney might have to be resumed unless progress was shown soon.

Water Gap project included

PHILADELPHIA—The Delaware Valley Conservation Assn., which Monroe County Commissioner Nancy Shukaitis organized to combat the Tocks Island Dam and Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area, has filed suit Friday to halt the two federal projects.

The suit, actually an appeal, was filed in the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit in Philadelphia.

The suit by the 60 member association had been dismissed late last year by the U. S. District Court of Middle Pennsylvania in Scranton.

The District Court's contention in dismissing the suit was that the U. S. government cannot be sued without permission.

Area residents

The 600 association members are all residents of the Tocks Island Region. Many members, however, are vacation home owners.

Philadelphia Attorney Austin J. McGreal, one of four attorneys representing the association, asked the Court of Appeals Friday to issue an injunction against the project. If granted, work on the two projects would discontinue until the matter goes into court litigation.

Mrs. Shukaitis was not able to be reached by telephone for comments on the appeal.

McGreal told judges Gerald McLaughlin, Abraham Freedman and C. J. Seitz that his clients were entitled to prove their allegations and that it was not improper to sue the United States concerning an act which they allege to be unconstitutional.

Raymond N. Zagone, a Department of Justice attorney from Washington, said the U. S. District Judge William Nealon of Scranton was entirely right in dismissing the complaint. He added the Flood Control Act of 1952 and the law passed by Congress creating the Delaware Water Gap area were constitutional "beyond question."

Claim of error

McGreal, however, insisted that Nealon committed reversible error in denying the association and the complaining residents a right to proceed to trial and prove their claims.

The Court of Appeals judges took the case under advisement. Indications are that the three judges may rule on the matter within the next few weeks. If the judges deny the appeal, the association has the right to appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The proposed recreation area, authorized in 1962, would include facilities for water conservation and supply, flood control, recreation and hydroelectric power.

Under the act, the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers was authorized to acquire properties within the area and after acquisition transfer jurisdiction to the Secretary of Interior.

The project specifically is designed to provide flood storage capacity of nearly 80 billion gallons which will aid in reducing flood stages along the Delaware River in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and also supply the future water needs of the Trenton, N. J., metropolitan Philadelphia area.

Additionally the area is expected to provide recreational needs for some 10 million people annually in the Philadelphia-New York City complex.

New criticism may arise from hearings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Public hearings planned by the Senate Foreign Relations committee this year are likely to produce sharp new criticism of the Johnson administration's overseas policies.

The panel includes several of the leading Senate critics of the Vietnam war.

They include the chairman, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., who said the goal of the inquiry would be "to try to develop as best we can what our policies ought to be."

Laying groundwork

The committee staff is now laying the groundwork for the hearings, with the formal agenda to be set by the committee after the new session of Congress opens Monday.

One area expected to be explored will go to the heart of the Vietnam dispute between President Johnson and Fulbright.

The chairman has expressed support for a proposal that the committee take a close look at the origins and nature of the Viet Cong and its political arm, the National Liberation Front.

South Africa's transplant well

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—Philip Blaiberg's transplanted heart is supporting his blood circulation well and "I think he is 50 to 60 per cent better than he was before the operation," Dr. Christian N. Barnard said Friday.

The surgeon told a news conference a virus infection in the throat of the 58-year-old retired dentist has almost been cleared up.

Ecumenical supper set in Cresco

CRESO — An ecumenical covered dish supper will be held Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Pocono Central Catholic School.

Participating will be St. Bernadette's Roman Catholic Church, pastor the Rev. James Maloney; Canadensis Moravian Church, pastor the Rev. James Gross; Keokee Evangelical United Brethren Church, pastor the Rev. Russell Walters; the Methodist Church, Mount Airy, pastor the Rev. John Roberts; and the Methodist Church, Canadensis, pastor the Rev. Vernon Murray.

Dinner arrangements are being made by a committee of women from the various churches headed by Mrs. Norbert Ryan.

After dinner there will be a panel discussion with Roberts as moderator. Topic for discussion will be, "The Bible," with Maloney speaking on the canonical books, Walters on inspiration, Murray on interpretation, and Gross on application.

These talks will be brief with an opportunity to ask questions afterward.

Each family attending is asked to bring either meat, vegetables, salad, or dessert. Rolls, butter and beverage will be provided by the arrangements committee. Last year's program attracted 350. All interested persons are invited to participate again this year.

Interfaith marriages now common

NEW YORK (AP) — Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studies show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sarason, associate professor of psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback is noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic-Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller grasp of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deep love and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N.J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence" for the other.

John recorded Lord's ministry

By R. H. Ramsey

Almost all of what happened in the first year of our Lord's ministry, immediately following His baptism by John the Baptist, is recorded exclusively in the Gospel of John, and many of the episodes recorded in the first five chapters are not even mentioned in the other three gospels.

The opening verses of today's lesson are a repetition of last week's closing verses, so we will consider them briefly. After Jesus' baptism by John the Baptist, John's proclamation of him as the Lamb and Son of God caused two of John's disciples—John, the writer, and Andrew, brother of Simon who would become Peter—to be drawn to Jesus.

These disciples, in turn, brought other disciples, as Andrew brought his brother but in some cases, Jesus sought out His own disciples, as He chose Philip as He walked the road to Capernaum. Philip instantly agreed to join the party and then hurried off to enlist a friend, Nathanael.

When Philip told Nathanael he had found the One of whom Moses and the prophets had written, and that He came from Nazareth, that student of the Scriptures, the Law and the Prophets became skeptical and cynical.

However, Jesus' first words convinced him and Nathanael joined the group. That night Jesus and his five followers returned to His home in Nazareth, where they found all the women in the midst of preparations for the wedding of a daughter of friends of Mary, the mother of Jesus.

Even though Jesus and His followers had returned to Nazareth unexpectedly and at the last minute, they were also invited to the wedding which was to take place in the nearby village of Cana, which also happened to be the home of Nathanael.

In those days a marriage feast was a lengthy affair, lasting from one to two weeks. They were happy affairs and people came expecting prolonged joy.

However, after the festivities had been going on for a time, Mary, the mother of Jesus—probably because of her involvement in the preparations for the feast—got the word that the wine was about to run out.

Whether the host families had bitten off more than they could chew, or whether the guests had stayed longer than was expected is beside the point. Both families were about to be socially embarrassed and the young bride and bridegroom knowing this, and aware of her Son's divine powers, Mary appealed to Jesus to do something about it.

Her request appears to have unsettled and irritated him for, despite His respect and love for His mother, there is a certain rebuke in His words.

But He is persuaded to use His powers to relieve the situation. Mary ordered the servants to obey Jesus exactly.

Without hesitation He ordered them to draw water and bear it into the banquet room, there to serve it to the governor of the feast.

That Jesus was both human and divine is clearly illustrated in this episode.

This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him. —John 2:11.

COURT OR CHURCH—WHICH?

When the gavel falls and court sentence has been pronounced we have started late in reforming the juvenile delinquent. That is not to say, however, that we abandon all hope and cease to try. But the hygienic maxim, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," applies equally well to all of our children.

There is, of course, no substitute for proper parental guidance. Juvenile delinquents, as a rule, do not come from families where the parents play with, teach and devote time to their children.

A church, where the whole family attends services and functions regularly, is the greatest auxiliary parents have in child guidance. For the training of the mind and heart in things not materialistic there is no institution that can replace the church. It can be a source of profound joy for the whole family—let's see you and your children in church this Sunday, and every Sunday thereafter.

God's service station keeps life in order

One is left with a monument of cleverly put-together metal that by reason of the cold leaves you with having nothing!

Now, it may not be the major problems such as batteries or lack of anti-freeze that puts all efforts to a halt, but a tiny speck of ice formed in a tiny pipe line that can choke 280 horsepower into no power whatsoever, our spiritual life is much like our automotive counterparts. Some of us cherish and polish the outside shell of our cars and forget to use the engine enough to charge up the battery or neglect to use high octane fuel that will make the engine burn with a hotter spark.

Our battery (Soul) should be kept charged and protected from the cold by the warmth of the love of God. This is accomplished by study, prayer, and associating oneself close to the things of The Lord. The fuel needed for our spiritual engine is the High Powered Word of God, the Bible.

The carburetor (heart) must be open and primed to receive this life-giving fuel.

It is our coldness to the word of God that can destroy our spiritual traveling. The moment that we put our own desires or pleasures ahead of what we know is the will of God is when we let that little piece of ice form in our spiritual lifeline.

We must put God first in all things before we can bask in the eternal Summer of God's love, safe, from sudden freeze-ups. The attending of church is akin to having one's battery charged, keeping it always full of power. God's word is the fuel that keeps our engine running on all eight. If one never takes his car to a service station for tune-ups how can he expect trouble free driving?

Spiritual coldness is the greatest curse of mankind. The chill starts so slight and intensifies so quietly that one does not notice his condition until he is in deep freeze and spiritually dead.

Many shall be in eternal cold, shall beg, and have nothing because they would not work because of the cold. One must work off the cold early in life, else we will be eternally cold to all the pleadings of God.

Our loss of His Love will be entirely our own will and fault. Small comfort that will be, when we are face to face with the fact that we chose to ignore His Love, and now have no choice at all!

There is still time, warm up to God's invitation before it is too late. Your service station is still open this weekend. Go and get "in tune" with eternal "Happy motoring!"

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—John 1:43-2:12.

On the road to Capernaum Jesus recruits Philip who immediately goes off to enlist the scholarly Nathanael. —John 1:43-46.

Nathanael scoffs at Philip's belief in Christ as the Messiah, but becomes convinced on meeting Jesus.—John 1:47-51.

Invited to a marriage feast in Cana, Jesus' aid is sought when the wine supply proves insufficient. —John 2:1-5.

Jesus turns water into wine and His first miracle is accomplished.—John 2:6-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: John 2:11.

John recorded Lord's ministry

By R. H. Ramsey

Almost all of what happened in the first year of our Lord's ministry, immediately following His baptism by John the Baptist, is recorded exclusively in the Gospel of John, and many of the episodes recorded in the first five chapters are not even mentioned in the other three gospels.

The opening verses of today's lesson are a repetition of last week's closing verses, so we will consider them but briefly. After Jesus' baptism by John the Baptist, John's proclamation of Him as the Lamb and Son of God caused two of John's disciples—John, the writer, and Andrew, brother of Simon who would become Peter—to be drawn to Jesus.

These disciples, in turn, brought other disciples, as Andrew brought his brother but in some cases, Jesus sought out His own disciples, as He chose Philip as He walked the road to Capernaum. Philip instantly agreed to join the party and then hurried off to enlist a friend, Nathanael.

When Philip told Nathanael he had found the One of whom Moses and the prophets had written, and that He came from Nazareth, that student of the Scriptures, the Law and the Prophets became skeptical and cynical.

However, Jesus' first words convinced him and Nathanael joined the group. That night Jesus and his five followers returned to His home in Nazareth, where they found all the women in the midst of preparations for the wedding of a daughter of friends of Mary, the mother of Jesus.

Even though Jesus and His followers had returned to Nazareth unexpectedly and at the last minute, they were also invited to the wedding which was to take place in the nearby village of Cana, which also happened to be the home of Nathanael.

In those days a marriage feast was a lengthy affair, lasting from one to two weeks. They were happy affairs and people came expecting prolonged joy.

However, after the festivities had been going on for a time, Mary, the mother of Jesus—probably because of her involvement in the preparations for the feast—got the word that the wine was about to run out.

Whether the host families had bitten off more than they could chew, or whether the guests had stayed longer than was expected is beside the point. Both families were about to be socially embarrassed and the young bride and bridegroom knowing this, and aware of her Son's divine powers, Mary appealed to Jesus to do something about it.

Her request appears to have unsettled and irritated him for, despite His respect and love for His mother, there is a certain rebuke in His words.

But He is persuaded to use His powers to relieve the situation. Mary ordered the servants to obey Jesus exactly.

Without hesitation He ordered them to draw water and bear it into the banquet room, there to serve it to the governor of the feast.

That Jesus was both human and divine is clearly illustrated in this episode.

This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.—John 2:11.

COURT OR CHURCH—WHICH?

When the gavel falls and court sentence has been pronounced we have started late in reforming the juvenile delinquent. That is not to say, however, that we abandon all hope and cease to try. But the hygienic maxim, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," applies equally well to all of our children.

There is, of course, no substitute for proper parental guidance. Juvenile delinquents, as a rule, do not come from families where the parents play with, teach and devote time to their children.

A church, where the whole family attends services and functions regularly, is the greatest auxiliary parents have in child guidance. For the training of the mind and heart in things not materialistic there is no institution that can replace the church. It can be a source of profound joy for the whole family—let's see you and your children in church this Sunday, and every Sunday thereafter.

Nothing new in report

By Norman B. Lehde

When the Pennsylvania Department of Highways informed Milford Borough that a dangerous traffic condition existed at four separate corners on Broad St. the intersections with Ann, Catharine, High and George they were not revealing anything new to the motorists of the area.

Trying to emerge from one of these avenues onto Broad St. can be quite a chore. On a busy day when a constant flow of cars, trucks and mobile homes are passing through the village, other vehicles parked along the curbs obstruct the view so that it is imperative to pull out where you are a target before you can see what is aiming at you.

The Highways Department has suggested a further curtailment of parking near the intersections. This might help a little, but the plain truth appears to be that there is too much through traffic. Until some of this is diverted by Route 84 and the drivers who have no reason, or desire, to enter Milford, may tour around the village, one can expect to continue to exhaust his patience and his vocabulary at Milford's main street intersections.

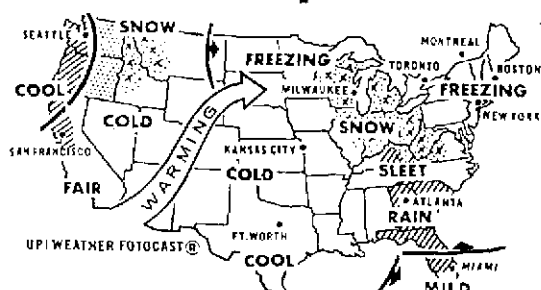

THE VERY FACT that, with few exceptions, most of Milford's residents will welcome a highway being constructed outside of the town represents quite a transition in general viewpoint since other major highway changes were made in the area.

When the three lane, Routes Six and 209, was being planned to Port Jervis, and when Route Six was being widened, there was great fear that the village would be by-passed. To many this appeared a stroke of doom and there was great apprehension until it was determined the highways would continue through town.

The logic behind this reasoning was not unique at the time. Route numbers were yet to be drilled into the motorist's brain. When on a trip, one traveled from town to town. A journey was mapped that way and when one was lost or uncertain about direction, one asked for the location of a town or city instead of a route number.

Pike group to meet with board

MILFORD—The Pike County Educators Assn. has requested in writing to have a series of meetings with the Delaware Valley Board of Education to discuss mutual problems and to inquire about obtaining federal funds.

Seven representatives of the association were present at the school board meeting Thursday night in the office of the supervising principal.

Tentative date for the first meeting is Thursday, Jan. 25, at 8 p.m.

The board approved the hiring of two new teachers. Alton Williams was hired for $7,000 per year to teach social studies for Miss Frances Hankins for next semester. He has six years experience and a master's degree.

Robert E. Smith will teach driver education and social studies at a salary of $5,600 per year. A graduate of East Stroudsburg State College, he has one year's teaching experience. He was Chief of Police in Delaware Water Gap for five years.

Registration accepted. The board accepted Richard Wagner's resignation effective March 1, 1968. Wagner gave no reason for his resignation. No one has been named to replace him.

Mrs. Ellen Hudson, discussed the problem of transportation. Some children of kindergarten have no way of coming to school. Since kindergarten is not compulsory in this state some of the children who need school the most do not attend, according to Mrs. Hudson.

Mrs. Nancy Sigal offered to do research on kindergarten attendance.

The board agreed to ask Milford Council for permission to install flashing 15 miles per hour signs in front of the elementary school in Milford.

Leonard Mattar, in his report on the budget, noted that tighter control would be needed. A budget meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 13.

In a discussion of the proposed new high school building, Mattar cautioned it would not be realistic to suppose that the building will be ready by September 1969 as planned.

There are many unresolved problems, such as how big the gym will be and how the cafeteria will be set up.

The health department has turned down the proposed septic system.

After approval of preliminary plans by Harrisburg, plans will be submitted to teachers for suggestions.

Clergymen open ecumenical doors

If a stranger were to enter our community and seek counsel, for some reason, with the head of the local ministerial association, he'd be out of luck. Technically, the Monroe County clergy is without formal leadership. But, actually, there has never been a period when it was more obvious that our clergymen are capable of leadership and are providing it.

The Protestant ministers who belonged to the county Ministerium have abandoned it. They are forming, instead, the county Clergy Association and in this they are not alone. Joining in the new organization are ordained Jews and Catholics.

The stranger might only ask, "What took them so long?"

All Christians have believed in one God with one purpose—love; and yet, the differences in lesser beliefs have created rivalries that blocked civilized discussion to the point that any cooperation was heralded as a breakthrough. There was no love and little understanding between faiths.

If religion is the best hope for peace, as most believe, then the ecumenical strides of the last decade that include such action as is being taken by Monroe clergymen are crucial. Before there can be any prayer of good will to all, there must be good will among houses of worship and the people within them.

Pro football's kings try to prove it again

The end is in sight for the king... for "King Football," at least, if not for the kings of football.

The new national pastime for TV viewers reaches its climax Sunday with the second Super Bowl matching the new champions of the new league against the old champions of the old league. Except for a couple of all-star games next weekend, professional football ends its television season as Oakland challenges Green Bay.

What began with exhibition in August heat, will end in Miami's January heat. In between, the sport has flourished in snow, mud and cold that would bring even a postman in from his appointed rounds.

Green Bay, in fact, played at home in 13-below-zero weather to defeat Dallas and win the National League title two weeks ago. A temperature difference of 100 degrees would not be unexpected tomorrow but the result is expected to be more of the same.

The champion of the young American League was thrown into its first Super Bowl game against the National League's best—Green Bay—a year ago. It was a ball game for a half. Then, experience, personnel and class made it a rout.

Some day soon the American League will be able to match the older league on even terms but it would be a major surprise if this turned out to be the year.

A long season of football ends this weekend but the reign of the Green Bay Packers will last a little longer. Maybe a lot longer.

Ole! to Mexico

BY ROBERT SVENSSON

While most of the nations of the world continue to debase their coinage, and, in some cases, to issue paper in place of coins, a refreshing breeze blows in from south of the border.

Mexico is doing a big switch.

The Mexican government has announced that during 1968 it is planning a systematic program which will result in the replacement of its One Peso paper notes with silver One Peso coins. Eventually the paper peso will be phased out completely.

Actually, Mexico has been producing the peso coin continuously since 1957. Its production facilities did not permit enough to be minted to satisfy the needs of the country.

The peso coin is about the size of a United States silver dollar, but with far less silver content. It is about .100 fine. A peso is valued at about 8 cents in U.S. money.

At least a coin is replacing paper—and that is good news in a silver-hungry world. So, Ole! to Mexico.

Mexico has been having its paper pesos privately printed in the United States. In announcing the change to coins, the Mexican government points out that the paper money is "uneconomical." It wears out quickly, and replacements are expensive. Moreover, paper is dirty and unsanitary.

Then there is the cost factor. The coins will last indefinitely, and since Mexico does not anticipate any hoarding problem, the coins should be circulating freely for years to come.

Happily, Mexico is a silver-producing nation, second only to the United States. Obviously, she has enough on hand to take care of the change needs of her citizens.

Moreover, Mexico will have a brand new mint to take care of production of the new peso coins. Mexico is famous for the beauty and originality of her coinage.

'Psst—you think there's something in the wind?'

Surrender terms

No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender may be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works. — Ulysses S. Grant, Feb. 16, 1862.

WASHINGTON — Unconditional surrender is a kind of redundancy. Webster defines "to surrender" itself as "to give up completely; to resign; relinquish."

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's famous ultimatum to his West Point classmate, Gen. Simon B. Buckner, at Fort Donelson, Tenn., gained him a nickname, but it was not wholly characteristic. Indeed, historian Frederick L. Paxson describes Grant's later terms to Lee at Appomattox as "so considerate and magnanimous that they were never questioned by the Confederate chieftain."

Nevertheless, President Franklin D. Roosevelt had Grant's formula in mind when he called for unconditional surrender Casablanca Conference communiqué of Jan. 24, 1942. Sir Arthur Bryant recalls that Roosevelt "added an unexpected postscript at a press conference...when the Allies were going to insist on 'unconditional surrender.'"

Sir Winston Churchill gave full attention to the Casablanca "Unconditional Surrender" utterance in the House of Commons on July 21, 1942. He said that the first time he heard the words was from the lips of the President (Roosevelt) at the Casablanca press conference. But at the same time Churchill says he had previously consulted with his War Cabinet on the phrase. He quotes as "conclusive" the President's account to his aide, Harry L. Hopkins:

"We had so much trouble getting those two French generals (Giraud and De Gaulle) together that I thought to myself that this was as difficult as arranging the meeting of Grant and Lee — and then suddenly the press conference was on, and Winston and I had had no time to prepare for it, and the thought popped into my mind that they had called Grant 'Old Unconditional Surrender,' and the next thing I knew I had said it."

Hitler's propaganda minister, Paul J. Goebbels, made a great deal out of the "unconditional surrender" statement in trying to whip the German people into a state of all-out resistance. But William L. Shirer, a close and dispassionate observer of World War II, states: "In the opinion of this author, his success has been grossly exaggerated by a surprisingly large number of Western writers."

The Soviet Union at the Moscow Conference of Allied Foreign Ministers in October 1943 formally adhered to the Casablanca declaration of unconditional surrender. This solid front was to lead to much post-war discussion that the Japanese leader, like the Germans, were of unconditional surrender. This solid front was the time when negotiation would have been possible. John Gunther offers this rebuttal in Roosevelt in Retrospect: "Unconditional surrender did not prolong the war; Hitler, we know now, would have fought to the last gasp anyway, and so did the Japanese."

Churchill was of the same mind. At any rate "unconditional surrender" has a hollow ring today. The settlement in Korea was neither unconditional nor surrender. None but the superpowers are holding out for anything like surrender in Vietnam.

Muffle your horn

Three persons have, over a period of years, asked me how to write an autobiography. This is remarkable, because I have never written one. However, the people are: Maurice Chevalier, Clare Boothe Luce, and Frank Sinatra. I respect each of them for a variety of reasons. Each has a stubborn integrity, and this leads to self-censorship, which is as evil as self-praise.

Mrs. Luce is a gifted writer, and one evening we had dinner at her home in Scottsdale, Arizona. She had found that sculpting the face of another is one thing; looking in a mirror and chipping at the glassy image of one's own face is impossible. A flamboyant egotist might bring it off as a cover-to-cover love affair with himself. But who would read it?

Her great play was "The Woman," just as her finest diplomatic moment was as ambassador to Italy. She was married to Henry Luce, who founded Time Magazine. In candlelight, she was bright and serene, but I was of no help, except in finishing a good dinner. How could I tell her that a good autobiography is a weathered face held up to light and shadow?

Rules for Chevalier
She hasn't got one. I was still dwelling on it, at random moments, when Maurice Chevalier stopped by. He was 77, a French dance hall man with an ingratiating smile, a straw hat, and many love affairs. He wanted to write his life story, he said, and would I please write the rules — see how play.

I sat with him over hot tea. A ballpoint pen danced a ragodon on a sheet of paper and I folded it and handed it over. "You won't do it," I said. "This is a waste of time." He assured me that he would begin at once, back at his home, La Louque, near Paris. I assured him that he would discuss it over wine for months, but that he would never write a line.

"Will you write about your love affairs?" I said. "Some," he said. I smiled. "You see? You're edition already." I was surprised to find that he is not an admirer who forgets. He visits old beauties who were dear to him a half century ago. And he always brings violets and that sexy smile. One of his one-time friends has lost her mind, and Maurice Chevalier visits her in an institution, where she sits in silence, hands between knees. He presses the violets on her, and reminisces about a great love, even though she never raises her eyes.

At La Louque, the lover who never had a child buys the love of nine youngsters, the offspring of servants. Whenever he returns from a trip, Chevalier is met at the door by little boys and girls in Sunday best, with scrubbed faces, who press their kisses on him as he croonches and the gifts tumble from his arms.

Frank Sinatra said: "I'm going to do it." I believe him. This man with the lean good kisser has a lot to tell. Also, he keeps his banner high. He won't cheapen the work with lovable lies. His story can make readers flinch. "I have pockets full of paper," he says. "Every time I think of something, I put it on a scrap of paper."

That's as good a way to start as any other. The problem is, what to do with the scraps of paper when you get home. It just so happens that, around Christmas 1960, Richard Nixon asked me about the mechanics of rapping out a book and, as he had just lost an election and was out of work, I sat and wrote the following, which came to me in a flash after writing several worst sellers:

1. Meditate on your life at least a half hour a day, alone. 2. Write a single sentence, or "core line" regarding each event that comes to mind. 3. Buy some notebooks, marked with "ears" that depict each year of your life. Once a week, place cue lines in the proper years.
4. Go to the public library and research every year of your life. Find out the principal news events, the fashions, the sports events, theatre and scientific progress of each year. File them in the notebooks.
5. Interview relatives, friends, casual enemies, and school chums. Tap their heads for truth, which you will find, is difficult to detect from abject flattery. Make more notes.
6. Examine your own weaknesses. File under the proper year all blunders, selfishness, ignorance, misjudgments and wounds. To keep from going crazy, on alternate nights study your past for triumphs, small and large. Place them in juxtaposition with the others.
7. The opening chapter should be you today. Everything is great and repetitious. Write individual scenes within chapters. Never fail to note weather, background, and characters. Respect all words. Never have more than one working for you at a time.
8. Finish the work. Burn it...

Top Soviet agent advises Sihanouk

WASHINGTON — One of the Kremlin's most trusted agents is advising the Cambodian Chief of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in his negotiations with the U. S.

Sergei Kudryavtsev, who supervised the installation of Soviet missiles in Cuba in 1962, has been in almost daily contact with Sihanouk since he became the new Russian ambassador to Cambodia last September.

According to U. S. intelligence sources, Ambassador Kudryavtsev receives his instructions directly from the Soviet Communist Party's international section in Moscow rather than the government's foreign office — the usual procedure for Russian diplomats.

Since taking over the strategic diplomatic post in Phnompenh, Kudryavtsev also has made several mysterious trips to Hanoi accompanied by several known Soviet secret police (KGB) agents who served with him in Havana and Bonn.

Kudryavtsev, who was ordered out of Canada on charges of heading the Soviet spy ring broken up by the defection of cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko in 1946, is considered to be one of Russia's four top diplomatic spies now operating throughout the world.

The significance of Kudryavtsev's shift to Cambodia was first revealed by a captured Russian spy named Luri Loginov, now languishing in prison in South Africa. When first questioned, he forecast the shift of Kudryavtsev from before it was made.

Increased Soviet help — Since Kudryavtsev's arrival in Cambodia, Soviet military aid to that Southeast Asian kingdom has been greatly increased.

The Russians have delivered more than 2,000 artillery pieces and mortars alone to the Cambodians in recent weeks — or more than Sihanouk's 36,000-man army could ever use.

U. S. military intelligence officials are convinced that these Soviet arms are being turned over to regular North Vietnamese troops now using Cambodia as a sanctuary. This supply channel was partly confirmed by the recent use of many new Soviet-made artillery pieces and mortars by North Vietnamese troops in their attacks on U. S. forces in South Vietnam near the Cambodian border.

THE CHINESE BUILDUP — Peking is continuing to reinforce its growing army in North Vietnam at the same time that Hanoi is filling the air with negotiation feelers.

In recent weeks Chinese Communist troops have been reported dramatically increased from 75,000 to "more than 200,000." One of the most recent Defense Intelligence Agency estimates lists the number of Chinese troops in North Vietnam as high as 250,000.

Peking first sent railway transportation corps troops to help repair railroads and bridges in North Vietnam's northern provinces in late 1965.

Since September, however, Communist China's reinforcements have turned out to be first line combat troops, including several artillery battalions, according to these reports. These troops appear to be moving into positions near the demilitarized zone that divides South and North Vietnam.

Recent U. S. bombing raids on a key rail bridge within nine miles of the China-North Vietnam border were partly designed to close one of the main entry points for these troops.

Neither President Johnson nor his foreign policy advisers have made any official announcement on this alarming estimate of Chinese troops in North Vietnam, because it conflicts with other intelligence assessments.

Most disconcerting of these is a finding by the CIA's intelligence estimate experts that China will not enter the Vietnam war since its land forces and arms industry cannot support any large scale military involvement at this time.

This estimate refers to the Chinese in North Vietnam as "Military labor battalions being used to repair bomb damage."

Red civil rights

WASHINGTON — Russia is in the midst of its own civil rights revolution.

It is having dangerous difficulty with its freedom-minded younger generations. They want to think for themselves, speak for themselves and with increasing boldness, are demanding the right to do so.

The regime is hard put to know what to do. It gives a little more freedom to writers, students, young professors and other intellectuals who demand more. Then the Kremlin applies new repressions, as it is now doing, and the freedom-prone younger generations refuse to be cowed.

The demands are getting bolder and the government will soon have to choose between two dangerous courses — whether to yield greater freedom or apply greater repression.

It has reached the point now where many of the protesters have freed themselves from fear of the government. From the standpoint of the regime, this is ominous.

Signs of freedom
Here is how they are expressing this freedom from fear:

They are beginning to talk back to the KGB, the Soviet police.

They are insisting that the courts begin to honor the Soviet constitution which guarantees "the right of street demonstrations" and the "right of free speech."

They are refusing to plead guilty when they are innocent and are sending abroad letters of protest and transcripts of court proceedings which the Soviet newspapers refuse to print.

The latest to risk arrest by publicizing his own case abroad is Pavel M. Litvinov, a 28-year-old chemistry teacher at the Moscow Institute and grandson of Maxim Litvinov, distinguished Soviet foreign minister from 1930 to 1939 and later ambassador to the United States. The KGB called in young Litvinov to warn him against defending Vladimir Bukovsky, who was convicted of leading a public demonstration to protest the arrest of four editors who printed things the government didn't like.

Play by play

When a man of Litvinov's standing talks back to the secret police the way he did and then sends his notes to be published in the Western press, it is clear there is a passionate demand for freedom and a very special courage. Note this passage between KGB interrogator Gostev and Litvinov:

Gostev: "The news report (of Bukovsky's trial) is absolutely correct."

Litvinov: "It says there that Bukovsky pleaded guilty. I know perfectly well he did not plead guilty."

Gostev: "What does it matter? The court found him guilty."

Litvinov: "I am not talking about the court's decision. In general, it would be a good idea to tell more about Bukovsky, how he was arrested while reciting poetry on Mayakovsky Square, brought to the police station and beaten up."

Gostev: "This is not true."

Litvinov: "His mother said so."

Gostev: "Who cares what she said?"

Litvinov: "She did not tell it to me but to the court and nobody interrupted her or accused her of slander."

The hero of a contemporary Moscow play remarks about the Stalin era: "What is terrible is not that there are evil people in the world but that there are so many others who spend their lives being afraid of them."

This fear is plainly beginning to lift from the minds of many younger Russians. They are Communists and they are patriots but they apparently believe that freedom must be a prime ingredient of any decent society.

This confronts the regime with a perilous dilemma: it must either grant this freedom increasingly or suppress it vigorously.

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Understanding ailments

"Is my condition psychosomatic?" is a question that is asked with remarkable frequency of all doctors. Even in this enlightened age of psychological understanding, patients frequently feel guilty because they complain too much about a physical ailment, almost as if they had no right to be sick. They ask the question as if someone had looked at them accusingly that this might be the reason for their complaints.

It is now recognized that all disease is a combination of body and mind phenomena. The mind and body or the psyche and the soma are one, and they collaborate with each other in the production of all of the mysteries of health and disease.

Physicians in the practice of medicine will flatly state that they never, but never, see any person with disease who does not have, in addition to the physical problem, some emotional factor.

Totally different
It is well recognized that there are some diseases like asthma and ulcerative colitis that are entirely psychogenic in origin. Note the word "psychogenic," which means "born in the mind." This is totally different from the psychosomatic overtones that are found in all medical problems.

The extension of this concept is that the present-day practice of medicine cannot be totally effective unless all the social and psychological elements of living are taken into consideration by the doctor who treats disease.

Assange fear
Patients have a right to be afraid of the unknown and that fear must be assuaged if the complete treatment of a patient is to be effective. There must be no shame to the feeling that there may be some psychological element to a patient's disease. I have known many men who, as patients, were far more worried about their jobs, homes, insurance and their families than they were of the disease that brought them to me.

I recall telling a man that he had a tumor of a vocal cord and that he would probably, he incapacitated after surgery for about a week. "Can the operation be put off until the spring, because there is no one to clear the driveway of snow?" This is a simple explanation of the social and economic problems that are involved in the total practice of medicine.

Anxious to go home
Another patient, a mother of two young children, insisted that she had to go home a few days after surgery because her children needed her and that she was the only one that could handle them. Within the framework of this statement lies a combination of the mind, the body and the social structure that influences surgery and recovery.

Too often patients delay bringing their symptoms to a doctor because they are afraid that their families might believe that "it is all psychosomatic."

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from readers, and, while he cannot undertake to answer each one, he will use questions in this column whenever possible and when they are of general interest. Address your letters to Dr. Coleman in care of this newspaper.

The end is in sight for the king . . . for "King Football," at least, if not for the kings of football. The new national pastime for TV viewers reaches its climax Sunday with the second Super Bowl matching the new champions of the new league against the old champions of the old league. Except for a couple of all-star games next weekend, professional football ends its television season as Oakland challenges Green Bay. What began with exhibition in August heat, will end in Miami's January heat. In between, the sport has flourished in snow, mud and cold that would bring even a postman in from his appointed rounds. Green Bay, in fact, played at home in 13-below-zero weather to defeat Dallas and win the National League title two weeks ago. A temperature difference of 100 degrees would not be unexpected tomorrow but the result is expected to be more of the same. The champion of the young American League was thrown into its first Super Bowl game against the National League's best—Green Bay—a year ago. It was a ball game for a half. Then, experience, personnel and class made it a rout. Some day soon the American League will be able to match the older league on even terms but it would be a major surprise if this turned out to be the year. A long season of football ends this weekend but the reign of the Green Bay Packers will last a little longer. Maybe a lot longer.

Coin corner Ole! to Mexico

BY ROBERT SVENSSON While most of the nations of the world continue to debase their coinage, and, in some cases to issue paper in place of coins, a refreshing breeze blows in from south of the border. Mexico is doing a big switch. The Mexican government has announced that during 1968 it is planning a systematic program which will result in the replacement of its One Peso paper notes with silver One Peso coins. Eventually the paper peso will be phased out completely. Actually, Mexico has been producing the peso coin continuously since 1957. Its production facilities did not permit enough to be minted to satisfy the needs of the country. The peso coin is about the size of a United States silver dollar, but with far less silver content. It is about .100 fine. A peso is valued at about 8 cents in U.S. money. At least a coin is replacing paper — and that is good news in a silver-hungry world. So, Ole! to Mexico. Mexico has been having its paper pesos privately printed in the United States. In announcing the change to coins, the Mexican government points out that the paper money is "uneconomical." It wears out quickly, and replacements are expensive. Moreover, paper is dirty and unsanitary. Then there is the cost factor. The coins will last indefinitely, and since Mexico does not anticipate any hoarding problem, the coins should be circulating freely for years to come. Happily, Mexico is a silver-producing nation, second only to the United States. Obviously, she has enough on hand to take care of the coinage needs of her citizens. Moreover, Mexico will have a brand new mint to take care of production of the new peso coins. Mexico is famous for the beauty and originality of her coinage.

Surrender terms

No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender may be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works. — Ulysses S. Grant, Feb. 16, 1862. WASHINGTON — Unconditional surrender is a kind of redundancy. Webster defines "to surrender" itself as "to give up completely; to resign; relinquish." Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's famous ultimatum to his West Point classmate, Gen. Simon B. Buckner, at Fort Donelson, Tenn., gained him a nickname, but it was not wholly characteristic. Indeed, historian Frederick L. Paxson describes Grant's later terms to Lee at Appomattox as "so considerate and magnanimous that they were never questioned by the Confederate chieftain." Nevertheless, President Franklin D. Roosevelt had Grant's formula in mind when he called for unconditional surrender Casablanca Conference communique of Jan. 24, 1942. Sir Arthur Bryant recalls that Roosevelt "added an unexpected postscript at a press conference...when the Allies were going to insist on "unconditional surrender." Sir Winston Churchill gave full attention to the Casablanca "Unconditional surrender" utterance in The Hinge of Fate, but left us with no clear answers. Churchill admits to having said in the House of Commons on July 21, 1949 that "the first time I heard the words was from the lips of the President (Roosevelt) at the Casablanca press conference." But at the same time Churchill says he had previously consulted with his War Cabinet on the phrase. He quotes as "conclusive" the President's account to his aide, Harry L. Hopkins: "We had so much trouble getting those two

Muffle your horn

Three persons have, over a period of years, asked me how to write an autobiography. This is remarkable, because I have never written one. However, the people are: Maurice Chevalier, Clare Boothe Luce, and Frank Sinatra. I respect each of them for a variety of reasons. Each has a stubborn integrity, and this leads to self-condemnation, which is as evil as self-praise. Mrs. Luce is a gifted writer, and one evening we had dinner at her home in Scottsdale, Arizona. She had found that sculpting the face of another is one thing; looking in a mirror and chipping at the glassy image of one's own face is impossible. A flamboyant egotist might bring it off as a cover-to-cover love affair with himself. But who would read it? Her great play was "The Woman," just as her finest diplomatic moment was as ambassador to Italy. She was married to Henry Luce, Who founded Time Magazine. In candlelight, she was bright and serene, but I was of no help, except in finishing a good dinner. How could I tell her that a good autobiography is a weathered face held up to light and shadow? Rules for Chevalier She hasn't got one. I was still dwelling on it, at random moments, when Maurice Chevalier stopped by. He was 77, a French dance hall man with an ingratiating smile, a straw hat, and many love affairs. He wanted to write his life story, he said, and would I please write the rules — see boo play. I sat with him over hot tea. A ballpoint pen danced a rigodon on a sheet of paper and I folded it and handed it over. "You won't do it," I said. "This is a waste of time." He assured me that he would begin at once, back at his home, La Louque, near Paris. I assured him that he would discuss it over wine for months, but that he would never write a line. "Will you write about your love affairs?" I said. "Some," he said. I smiled. "You see? You're edition already." I was surprised to find that he is not an admirer who forgets. He visits old beauties who were dear to him a half century ago. And he always brings violets and that sexy smile. One of his one-time friends has lost her mind, and Maurice Chevalier visits her in an institution, where she sits in silence, hands between knees. He presses the violets on her, and reminisces about a great love, even

WASHINGTON — One of the Kremlin's most trusted agents is advising the Cambodian Chief of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in his negotiations with the U. S. Sergei Kudryavtsev, who supervised the installation of Soviet missiles in Cuba in 1962, has been in almost daily contact with Sihanouk since he became the new Russian ambassador to Cambodia last September. According to U. S. intelligence sources, Ambassador Kudryavtsev receives his instructions directly from the Soviet Communist Party's international section in Moscow rather than the government's foreign office — the usual procedure for Russian diplomats. Since taking over the strategic diplomatic post in Phnompenh, Kudryavtsev also has made several mysterious trips to Hanoi accompanied by several known Soviet secret police (KGB) agents who served with him in Havana and Bonn. Kudryavtsev, who was ordered out of Canada on charges of heading the Soviet spy ring broken up by the defection of cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko in 1946, is considered to be one of Russia's four top diplomatic-spies now operating throughout the world. The significance of Kudryavtsev's shift to Cambodia was first revealed by a captured Russian spy named Luri Loginov, now languishing in prison in South Africa. When first questioned, he forecast the shift of Kudryavtsev from before it was made. Increased Soviet help — Since Kudryavtsev's arrival in Cambodia, Soviet military aid to that Southeast Asian kingdom has been greatly increased. The Russians have delivered more than 2,000 artillery pieces and mortars alone to the Cambodians in recent weeks — or more than Sihanouk's 36,000-man army could ever use. U. S. military intelligence officials are convinced that these Soviet arms are being turned over to regular North Vietnamese troops now using Cambodia as a sanctuary. This supply channel was partly confirmed by the recent use of many new Soviet-made artillery pieces and mortars by North Vietnamese troops in their attacks on U. S. forces in South Vietnam near the Cambodian border. THE CHINESE BUILDUP — Peking is continuing to reinforce its growing army in North Vietnam at the same time that Hanoi is filling the air with negotiation feelers. In recent weeks Chinese Communist troops have been reported dramatically increased from 75,000 to "more than 200,000." One of the most recent Defense Intelligence Agency estimates lists the number of Chinese troops in North Vietnam as high as 250,000. Peking first sent railway transportation corps troops to help repair railroads and bridges in North Vietnam's northern provinces in late 1965. Since September, however, Communist China's reinforcements have turned out to be first line combat troops, including several artillery battalions, according to these reports. These troops appear to be moving into positions near the demilitarized zone that divides South and North Vietnam. Recent U. S. bombing raids on a key rail bridge within nine miles of the China-North Vietnam border were partly designed to close one of the main entry points for these troops. Neither President Johnson nor his foreign policy advisers have made any official announcement on this alarming estimate of Chinese troops in North Vietnam, because it conflicts with other intelligence assessments. Most disconcerting of these is a finding by the CIA's intelligence estimate experts that China will not enter the Vietnam war since its land forces and arms industry cannot support any large scale military involvement at this time. This estimate refers to the Chinese in North Vietnam as "Military labor battalions being used to repair bomb damage."

Red civil rights

WASHINGTON — Russia is in the midst of its own civil rights revolution. It is having dangerous difficulty with its freedom-minded younger generations. They want to think for themselves, speak for themselves and with increasing boldness, are demanding the right to do so. The regime is hard put to know what to do. It gives a little more freedom to writers, students, young professors and other intellectuals who demand more. Then the Kremlin applies new repressions, as it is now doing, and the freedom-prone younger generations refuse to be cowed. The demands are getting bolder and the government will soon have to choose between two dangerous courses — whether to yield greater freedom or apply greater repression. It has reached the point now where many of the protesters have freed themselves from fear of the government. From the standpoint of the regime, this is ominous. Signs of freedom Here is how they are expressing this freedom from fear: They are beginning to talk back to the KGB, the Soviet police. They are insisting that the courts begin to honor the Soviet constitution which guarantees "the right of street demonstrations" and the "right of free speech." They are refusing to plead guilty when they are innocent and are sending abroad letters of protest and transcripts of court proceedings which the Soviet newspapers refuse to print. The latest to risk arrest by publicizing his own case abroad is Pavel M. Litvinov, a 28-year-old chemistry teacher at the Moscow Institute and grandson of Maxim Litvinov, distinguished Soviet foreign minister from 1930 to 1939 and later ambassador to the United States. The KGB called in young Litvinov to warn him against defending Vladimir Bukovsky, who was convicted of leading a public demonstration to protest the arrest of four editors who printed things the government didn't like. Play by play When a man of Litvinov's standing talks back to the secret police the way he did and then sends his notes to be published in the Western press, it is clear there is a passionate demand for freedom and a very special courage. Note this passage between KGB interrogator Gostev and Litvinov: Gostev: "The news report (of Bukovsky's trial) is absolutely correct." Litvinov: "It says there that Bukovsky pleaded guilty. I know perfectly well he did not plead guilty." Gostev: "What does it matter? The court found him guilty." Litvinov: "I am not talking about the court's decision. In general, it would be a good idea to tell more about Bukovsky, how he was arrested while reciting poetry on Mayakovsky Square, brought to the police station and beaten up." Gostev: "This is not true." Litvinov: "His mother said so." Gostev: "Who cares what she said?" Litvinov: "She did not tell it to me but to the court and nobody interrupted her or accused her of slander." The hero of a contemporary Moscow play remarks about the Stalin era: "What is terrible is not that there are evil people in the world but that there are so many others who spend their lives being afraid of them." This fear is plainly beginning to lift from the minds of many younger Russians. They are Communists and they are patriots but they apparently believe that freedom must be a prime ingredient of any decent society. This confronts the regime with a perilous dilemma: it must either grant this freedom increasingly or suppress it vigorously.

Understanding ailments

"Is my condition psychosomatic?" is a question that is asked with remarkable frequency of all doctors. Even in this enlightened age of psychological understanding, patients frequently feel guilty because they complain too much about a physical ailment, almost as if they had no right to be sick. They ask the question as if someone had looked at them accusingly that this might be the reason for their complaints. It is now recognized that all disease is a combination of body and mind phenomena. The mind and body or the psyche and the soma are one, and they collaborate with each other in the production of all of the mysteries of health and disease. Physicians in the practice of medicine will flatly state that they never, but never, see any person with disease who does not have, in addition to the physical problem, some emotional factor. Totally different It is well recognized that there are some diseases like asthma and ulcerative colitis that are entirely psychogenic in origin. Note the word "psychogenic," which means "born in the mind." This is totally different from the psychosomatic overtones that are found in all medical problems. The extension of this concept is that the present-day practice of medicine cannot be totally effective unless all the social and psychological elements of living are taken into consideration by the doctor who treats disease. Assuage fear Patients have a right to be afraid of the unknown and that fear must be assuaged if the complete treatment of a patient is to be effective. There must be no shame to the feeling that there may be some psychological element to a patient's disease. I have known many men who, as patients, were far more worried about their jobs, homes, insurance and their families than they were of the disease that brought them to me. I recall telling a man that he had a tumor of a vocal cord and that he would probably, be incapacitated after surgery for about a week. "When I assured him it was not, he said, "Can the operation be put off until the spring, because there is no one to clear the driveway of snow?" This is a simple explanation of the social and economic problems that are involved in the total practice of medicine. Anxious to go home Another patient, a mother of two young children, insisted that she had to go home a few days after surgery because her children needed her and that she was the only one that could handle them. Within the framework of this statement lies a combination of the mind, the body and the social structure that influences surgery and recovery. Too often patients delay bringing their symptoms to a doctor because they are afraid that their families might believe that "it is all psychosomatic." Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from readers, and, while he cannot undertake to answer each one, he will use questions in this column whenever possible and when they are of general interest. ## Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

The days are getting longer (imperceptibly but surely) but the weeks also seem to be getting longer. Anyway this week seemed as if it would never get to Saturday. Of course, we were spoiled by two straight four-day work weeks which makes five seem one too many.

But more than that, it was a physically uncomfortable week not only for getting from one place to another but also for sitting still while the cold seeped in doors and windows, flowed down the walls and crept across the floor like an icy stream, not less real because you couldn't see it.

It would have been a great week for painting ceilings. Those new boots people got for Christmas certainly got a workout not only outdoors but inside, too. However, a note of warning if they're the high-top, stretch kind. Women who've worn them constantly report something like jungle-rot setting in from lack of air and circulation.

Not many special events have been planned for either January or February, but wouldn't you know that the two which have would meet in a head-on collision tonight: the annual Historical Society dinner and the League of Women Voters supper.

Unfortunately, many of the same people would be interested in both affairs. It's not Trudi Helmann's fault. She nobly keeps up the Clearing House Calendar for the Women's Club just for that very purpose but if organizations don't call her she can't warn them off.

Well, next week doesn't promise to be any shorter or any warmer, but we'll be more acclimated to both, maybe. And if you want to take a long range view, the forecast is that March in this section of the country will be warmer and drier than usual.

The profits derived from the cookies sale is divided two ways...each girl receives credit of 5 cents per box for every box she sells which goes into her troop's treasury and which she can use towards a day or established camping experience during the 1968 camping season. The remainder of the profit is used by the council to maintain and update council camping sites in order that more girls can enjoy camping in the out-of-doors whether it be at day camp or established camp. Camp Archbold. Part of the profit is also used to supplement income received from Lackawanna United Fund, Monroe County Community Chest, and independent council campaigns, since none of these groups are successful in meeting 100 per cent of the

Add torte and herb bread

Stroudsburg — When a new cookbook is unusual and different from the many, many books now on the market, it's a gem. When it contains practical ideas as well, and recipes that are truly scrumptious, it's more than a gem...a veritable collection of rare food jewels.

The new Diamond Walnut Cookbook, now being offered by the Diamond Walnut Growers, is brightly illustrated and has 88 pages packed with over 200 kitchen-tested recipes and decorating tips to help you revive traditional favorites as well as try new dishes.

Typical of the mouth-watering recipes to be found between the covers is the one for Walnut Rum Torte, an unusual and interesting cake with its own Rum Sauce...much like a Rum Baba. Walnut-Herb Butter Bread and Cognac Chocolate-Walnut Pie are beauties, too, and good examples of the many recipes you'll find in this cookbook.

You can get all of these gems by sending your name and address with fifty cents to Diamond Walnut Growers, Inc. Recipe Department, P.R. Box 4142, Clinton, Iowa 52732. Have lots of fun trying out what suits your fancy, and be assured they are different, and scrumptious...some new, too.

Walnuts, themselves, aren't really new. Mention of walnuts is made in the annals of ancient Persia and Greece while in Caesar's day the citizens of Rome called them Jupiter's Acorns and valued them as food, as well as crediting them with magical power. Used once as a basis of barter, walnuts later became a major crop of several countries and were sold around the world...then during the establishment of the California Missions by the Franciscan fathers in the late eighteenth century, the walnut found its way to California. This was the end of its long and varied journey, for in California it flourished in the rich soil and sunny climate until now over 95 per cent of the United States crop comes from California, with most of the acreage lying in the central valleys of the state.

Walnut Rum Torte
One-third cup butter
8 egg whites
½ teaspoon salt
¾ tablespoons powdered sugar
6 egg yolks
1 cup granulated sugar
3 teaspoons vanilla
One and two-thirds cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup chopped toasted walnuts

Rum Sauce:
1½ cups granulated sugar
1¼ cups water
Dash of salt
Grated peel of ½ orange
¼ to ½ cup rum or 2 to 3 teaspoons rum flavoring

To make torte, melt butter and let cool. Beat egg whites with salt till soft peaks form; gradually add powdered sugar and beat till stiff but not dry. In separate bowl, beat yolks slightly; add sugar and vanilla; beat till thick and creamy. Sprinkle flour over whites, pour in yolks; gently fold till mixture is half blended. Add butter and ¾ cup walnuts; fold till barely mixed. Pour into buttered and floured 2½ to 3-quart mold (or 10-inch tube pan); top with remaining ¼ cup walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees 40 minutes or till done when tested with pick. Cool 10 minutes; add Rum Sauce.

To make Rum Sauce, combine granulated sugar, water, salt and grated orange and lemon peel. Bring mixture to boil; boil 10 minutes.

Cool. Stir in rum or rum flavoring. Make holes in cake with skewer; spoon sauce over cake. When sauce is absorbed (about 10 minutes) turn out on serving plate. Makes 10 servings.

Walnut-Herb Butter Bread
1 cup milk, scalded
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 packages (2 tablespoons) dry yeast
1 cup warm water
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
1½ teaspoons crushed sweet basil
1½ teaspoons tarragon leaves
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
4½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Mix together milk, sugar and salt; cool slightly. In large bowl, sprinkle yeast over water; stir till dissolved. Blend in milk mixture, herbs and flour; beat vigorously for two minutes, or till batter is salty. Cover and let rise in warm place till double in bulk, about 45 minutes. Add walnuts and stir batter down. Beat vigorously with spoon about one minute. Pour into lightly greased 1½-quart casserole. Bake uncovered at 375 degrees for one hour, or till done. Turn out of casserole and cool on rack. Makes one loaf.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

The days are getting longer (imperceptibly but surely) but the weeks also seem to be getting longer. Anyway this week seemed as if it would never get to Saturday. Of course, we were spoiled by two straight four-day work weeks which makes five seem one too many.

But more than that, it was a physically uncomfortable week not only for getting from one place to another but also for sitting still while the cold seeped in doors and windows, flowed down the walls and crept across the floor like an icy stream, not less real because you couldn't see it.

It would have been a great week for painting ceilings. Those new boots people got for Christmas certainly got a workout not only outdoors but inside, too. However, a note of warning if they're the thigh-high, stretch kind. Women who've worn them constantly report something like jungle-rot setting in from lack of air and circulation.

Not many special events have been planned for either January or February, but wouldn't you know that the two which have would meet in a head-on collision tonight: the annual Historical Society dinner and the League of Women Voters supper.

Unfortunately, many of the same people would be interested in both affairs. It's not Trudi Hellmann's fault. She nobly keeps up the Clearing House Calendar for the Women's Club just for that very purpose but if organizations don't call her she can't warn them off.

Well, next week doesn't promise to be any shorter or any warmer, but we'll be more acclimated to both, maybe. And if you want to take a long range view, the forecast is that March in this section of the country will be warmer and drier than usual.

Girl Scout cookie chairman plans for February sales

SCRANTON — Mrs. John Zloch, 511 Schubert Road, East Stroudsburg, has been appointed District V Cookie Chairman for the 1968 Girl Scout Cookie Sale of the Scranton Pocono Girl Scout Council.

Mrs. Zloch, who has taken an active part in Girl Scouting since her residence in the local area, will coordinate the distribution and records of all cookie sale transactions in District V.

District V comprises the four neighborhoods are Mountain Neighborhood, Pocono Neighborhood, East Stroudsburg Neighborhood and Clearfield.

Mrs. Sue Ellen Lee, Mountain; Mrs. Earl Holmes, Pocono; Mrs. Dale Parker, East Stroudsburg; and Mrs. Morris Henning, Stroudsburg.

More than 1500 girls in 75 troops will participate in the annual cookie sale during the period Feb. 3 - Feb. 24. The girl will canvas the area, asking residents to support them and their council's camping program through the purchase of Girl Scout cookies. Again this year, there will be five varieties from which prospective buyer may choose Vanilla, Sandwich, Peanut Butter, Cookie Mint, and Chocaron.

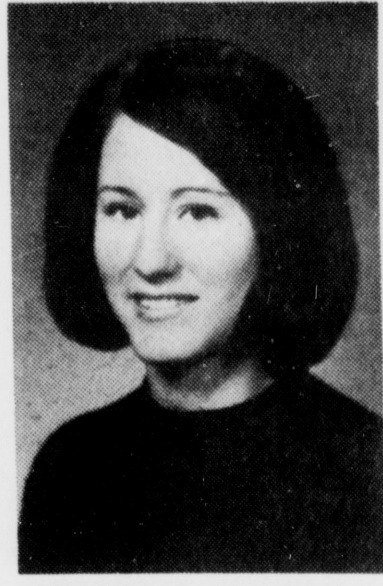

The profits derived from the cookies sale is divided two ways...each girl receives credit of 5 cents per box for every box she sells which goes into her troops treasury and which she can use towards a day or established camping experience during the 1968 camping season. The remainder of the profit is used by the council to maintain and update council camping sites in order that more girls can enjoy camping in the out-of-doors whether it be at day camp or established camp, Camp Archbald. Part of the profit is also used to supplement income received from Lackawanna United Fund, Monroe County Community Chest, and independent council campaigns, since none of these groups are successful in meeting 100 per cent of the

Walnut cake is a favorite in many households but new cookbook adds other interesting desserts using walnuts.

To your dessert file

Add torte and herb bread

Stroudsburg — When a new cookbook is unusual and different from the many, many books now on the market, it's a gem. When it contains practical ideas as well, and recipes that are truly scrumptious, it's more than a gem...it's a veritable collection of rare food jewels.

The new Diamond Walnut Cookbook, now being offered by the Diamond Walnut Growers, is brightly illustrated and has 88 pages packed with over 200 kitchen-tested recipes and decorating tips to help you revive traditional favorites as well as try new dishes.

Typical of the mouth-watering recipes to be found between the covers is the one for Walnut Rum Torte, an unusual and interesting cake with its own Rum Sauce...much like a Rum Baba. Walnut-Herb Batter Bread and Cognac Chocolate-Walnut Pie are beauties, too, and good examples of the many recipes you'll find in this cookbook.

You can get all of these gems by sending your name and address with fifty cents to Diamond Walnut Growers, Inc. Recipe Department PR, Box 4142, Clinton, Iowa 52732. Have lots of fun trying out what suits your fancy, and be assured they are different, and scrumptious...some new, too.

Walnuts, themselves, aren't really new. Mention of walnuts is made in the annals of ancient Persia and Greece while in Caesar's day the citizens of Rome called them Jupiter's Acorns and valued them as food, as well as crediting them with magical power. Used once as a basis of barter, walnuts later became a major crop of several countries and were sold around the world; then during the establishment of the California Missions by the Franciscan fathers in the late eighteenth century, the walnut found its way to California. This was the end of its long and varied journey, for in California it flourished in the rich soil and sunny climate until now over 95 per cent of the United States crop comes from California, with most of the acreage lying in the central valleys of the state.

Walnut Rum Torte

One-third cup butter
6 egg whites
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons powdered sugar
6 egg yolks
1 cup granulated sugar
3 teaspoons vanilla
One and two-thirds cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup chopped toasted Walnuts

Rum Sauce:

1½ cups granulated sugar
1¼ cups water
Dash of salt
Grated peel of ½ orange and ½ lemon
¼ to ½ cup rum or 2 to 3 teaspoons rum flavoring

To make torte, melt butter and let cool. Beat egg whites with salt till soft peaks form; gradually add powdered sugar and beat till stiff but not dry. In separate bowl, beat yolks slightly; add sugar and vanilla; beat till thick and creamy. Sprinkle flour over whites, pour in yolks; gently fold till mixture is half blended. Add butter and ¾ cup walnuts; fold till barely mixed. Pour into buttered and floured 2½ to 3-quart mold (or 10-inch tube pan); top with remaining ¼ cup walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees 40 minutes or till done when tested with pick. Cool 10 minutes; add Rum Sauce.

To make Rum Sauce, combine granulated sugar, water, salt and grated orange and lemon peel. Bring mixture to boil; boil 10 minutes.

Ann Landers

68-year-old problem

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a 68-year-old husband who has less sense than his teen-age grandson when it comes to how to behave around girls. Alex acts his worst when we go out to eat. If the waitress has her name on her uniform he has to use it immediately. For example: "Hello, Hazel. My but you look pretty tonight!" What is the old buzzard trying to prove that he can read?

I have told Alex dozens of times that it embarrasses me when he gets personal with the waitresses and they do not appreciate it either. He says I am crazy — that ALL women like to be told they have pretty hair or a lovely smile or a nice figure. When I reminded him that it has been 45 years since I have had a compliment from him he said, "Wives don't count."

Why does he behave this way and what can I do about it?

OLD GRAY MARE

Dear Marc: Alex knows it's a sure way to get your goat and he will continue to behave this way as long as you let him know he is succeeding. If you've been married for 45 years and this is all you have to complain about, lady, you are lucky. Be glad he can see.

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old daughter is driving me crazy. Lynn is a sophomore in high school and she spends twice as much time on her hair as on her homework.

Her last report card was disgraceful — nothing over a C and mostly D's. Lynn washes her hair every other night and rolls it up on curlers. This is tremendously time consuming because her hair is very long and thick.

In the meantime the family never sees her looking nice. When she comes to the dinner table her hair is already up in curlers. Frankly, I am sick of it. I will not allow Lynn to go to bed with a wet head so she must dry it before she sleeps, and this takes another hour. Every morning Lynn brushes and teases her hair for at least 30 minutes which means she has no time for a nourishing breakfast.

If you say this is just a phase I will keep quiet and continue to take tranquilizers. How about it?

MOTHER MARY

Dear Mother: Be thankful it's a daughter and not a son you are writing about.

Hair has always been a major bone of contention between parents and children and so long as there is hair there will be disagreement. As to what should be done about it, my advice is to save your pipes. Mother, insist that Lynn get her grades up if she wants to enjoy dating privileges but leave her hair out of it.

Dear Ann Landers: During the holidays we gave a series of small dinner parties. On two separate occasions, invited guests brought along another couple. I would not have minded if they had telephoned first, but they just showed up and said, "We knew it would be O.K."

I felt like a hypocrite smiling and saying, "Oh, it's perfectly all right." Frankly, I was burned up. My husband says I am petty. What do you say?

SHORT ON SILVERWARE

Dear Short: It's extremely poor taste to bring guests without first checking with the hostess. Unexpected dinner company can mean rearranging tables and a multiplicity of other problems. Social amenity demands that a surprised hostess be pleasant under such circumstances, but nothing says she has to invite the clods back.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Opening lead — four of clubs. It is easy enough to see that with a club lead declarer has the suit doubly stopped. It is less apparent, though, that after a club lead the suit is actually triply stopped if South plays his cards properly. Declarer failed to make this observation and, as a result, lost the contract.

He covered the four of clubs with the six and won East's seven with the nine. After crossing to dummy with a heart, declarer led the nine of diamonds and finessed, losing to West's queen.

West returned the king of clubs, which South ducked, and continued with the queen. South won but could now do no better than lead another diamond. West took the ace, cashed the 8-2 of clubs, and South went down one.

Actually, declarer should have made four notrump. His goal should be to establish three diamond tricks before West establishes his clubs. He is certain of making the contract if he can accomplish this.

According to the Rule of Eleven — assuming West has led his fourth best club — declarer can tell that East has only one club higher than the four. (Declarer subtracts four from the magic number eleven, leaving seven cards higher than the four in the North, East and South hands. Since six of these cards are in plain view, East can have only one.)

Declarer should play the ten from dummy on the opening lead. If East's club is the seven or eight, the ten will win and South is assured of a triple stopper in the suit. If East's club is the queen of king, South wins with the ace and is likewise sure of two more stoppers in the form of dummy's jack and his own nine.

By playing high from dummy at trick one, South assures himself of winning the race for the establishment of his long suit. He settles the issue on his first play.

Ann Landers

68-year-old problem

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a 68-year-old husband who has less sense than his teen-age grandson when it comes to how to behave around girls. Alex acts his worst when we go out to eat. If the waitress has her name on her uniform he has to use it immediately. For example: "Hello, Hazel. My but you look pretty tonight!" What is the old buzzard trying to prove that he can read?

I have told Alex dozens of times that it embarrasses me when he gets personal with the waitresses and they do not appreciate it either. He says I am crazy — that ALL women like to be told they have pretty hair or a lovely smile or a nice figure. When I reminded him that it has been 45 years since I have had a compliment from him he said, "Wives don't count."

Why does he behave this way and what can I do about it?

OLD GRAY MARE

Dear Mare: Alex knows it's a sure way to get your goat and he will continue to behave this way as long as you let him know he is succeeding. If you've been married for 45 years and this is all you have to complain about, lady, you are lucky. Be glad he can see.

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old daughter is driving me crazy. Lynn is a sophomore in high school and she spends twice as much time on her hair as on her homework.

Her last report card was disgraceful — nothing over a C and mostly D's. Lynn washes her hair every other night and rolls it up on curlers. This is tremendously time consuming because her hair is very long and thick.

In the meantime the family never sees her looking nice. When she comes to the dinner table her hair is already up in curlers. Frankly, I am sick of it. I will not allow Lynn to go to bed with a wet head so she must dry it before she sleeps, and this takes another hour. Every morning Lynn brushes and teases her hair for at least 30 minutes which means she has no time for a nourishing breakfast.

If you say this is just a phase I will keep quiet and continue to take tranquilizers. How about it?

MOTHER MARY

Dear Mother: Be thankful it's a daughter and not a son you are writing about.

Hair has always been a major bone of contention between parents and children and so long as there is hair there will be disagreement. As to what should be done about it, my advice is to save your pipes, Mother. Insist that Lynn get her grades up if she wants to enjoy dating privileges but leave her hair out of it.

Dear Ann Landers: During the holidays we gave a series of small dinner parties. On two separate occasions, invited guests brought along another couple. I would not have minded if they had telephoned first, but they just showed up and said, "We knew it would be O.K."

I felt like a hypocrite smiling and saying, "Oh, it's perfectly all right." Frankly, I was burned up. My husband says I am petty. What do you say?

SHORT ON SILVERWARE

Dear Short: It's extremely poor taste to bring guests without first checking with the hostess. Unexpected dinner company can mean rearranging tables and a multiplicity of other problems. Social amenity demands that a surprised hostess be pleasant under such circumstances, but nothing says she has to invite the clods back.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

False fire alarm after sonic boom

EAST STROUDSBURG — A loud boom, a cloud of vapor, and 40 Acme Hose Co. firemen on two trucks in below zero weather answered a false alarm Friday at 3:45 a.m.

What really happened was a sonic boom caused by a supersonic jet from United States Air Force Base, Westover, Mass., as it passed over the area on a training mission.

The speed of the plane set off a sonic boom, caused by a plane flying faster than the speed of sound, that echoed like an explosion.

Shortly after the boom someone mistook vapor from the cold weather for smoke and turned in the alarm. The vapor was coming from the area of Plant and Design Center on Lenox St., East Stroudsburg.

In a telephone conversation with Maj. Amy Smith, public information officer, Headquarters, Eighth Air Force, at Westover, the major said, "Yes, we did have aircraft over your area early Friday morning. They were flying a training mission, which is now completed. We (the Eighth Air Force) do not have any more training exercises involving aircraft in your area scheduled for the immediate future."

She expressed regret for the inconvenience to the people in the area.

Firms must report IRS dividends

STROUDSBURG — Taxpayers who receive dividend or interest income are required by law to give their tax account number to the organizations that pay the income, according to Seymour I. Friedman, District Director of Internal Revenue for Eastern Pennsylvania. For individual taxpayers, the tax account number is the Social Security number.

Business firms are required to report to IRS dividends or interest of $10 or more paid to anyone during a calendar year. The information returns, Forms 1099, are compared by computer with individual income tax returns to see if income is reported in the full amount.

Firms must also furnish a statement of total payments for the year to persons receiving dividends and interest amounting to $10 or more.

Leahy speaks to Lions Club

TANNERSVILLE — John Leahy of Crescent Lake, a retired post office employee, was the guest speaker at recent meeting of the Tannersville Lions Club.

Leahy told the Lions members in their Coral Reef Hotel meeting room that he is in the process of writing a book relating his 30 years experience in the postal department. He had worked his way up the ranks to become postal inspector, superintendent of postal service and director of personnel.

His address covered various phases of the post office work.

EAST STROUDSBURG — The lives of the ancient Greeks revolved around gymnastics. The lives of the Physical and Health Education majors at East Stroudsburg State College revolve around the new multi-million dollar Koehler Field House. It's their home away from home.

It's a dream house come true for Dr. Frank Sills, head of the Physical and Health Education Department at ESSC. He had his homework cut out for him in the research and design stage of his pet project.

He canvassed all but two of the "Big Ten" mid-western universities in seeking fresh ideas for the field house. Other department faculty members toured Eastern colleges and universities, including the Ivy League circuit and the two service academies, West Point and Annapolis.

"We were looking for special features," Dr. Sills said.

Special features
Where did the schools put the main arena (the gym) in their field houses? Seating capacity? Electrically operated grandstands versus portable grandstands? Office space? Dressing rooms? Equipment storage rooms? Always keeping in mind the utility of space, preserving it in function and design down to the last square inch.

Mike Miller was like every other station and garage operator Friday—he should have had four hands to take care of all the stalled cars and others that just refused to start. Mike is shown above, applying the "jumper cable" to two cars that refused to start at the same time.

Tough day on garagemen

But, a guy can take just so much and Miller is pictured clutching his head in despair while surrounded by balky cars that frigid area temperatures struck silent Friday. Miller was pictured going through his paces at a service station at Third and McConnell streets in Stroudsburg.

Lowest temperatures in area

STROUDSBURG — Temperatures clung to their sub-zero status in Monroe, Pike and Wayne counties Friday morning, with the lowest report being 28 below zero in Sciota.

An unofficial report of 26 below in Marshalls Creek was the second lowest temperature reported.

28 below zero point hit in freezing Monroe County

STROUDSBURG — Almost unbearable sub-zero temperatures continued to cling to all of the area covered by Monroe, Pike and Wayne counties early Friday morning, with slight hope of some relief today.

The lowest temperature reported in Monroe County was a reading of 28 below zero in Sciota, with a second low of 26 below coming from Marshalls Creek, although both were of the unofficial variety.

A low temperature of minus 20 degrees was reported in Stroudsburg, minus 18 in East Stroudsburg and 22 below zero in Stroud Township.

Impossible day
All-in-all, it made almost an impossible day for garagemen as a countless number of cars refused to start and required assistance or towing.

A check of area service stations revealed that they were unable to even hazard a guess as to how many cars required assistance Friday.

Plumbers were also busy throughout the day attempting to thaw out frozen water pipes and to pump new life into tired furnaces.

The thermometer is now in its 10th straight day of sub-freezing temperatures. The last time the mercury peaked above 32, was a shakey 33 on Thursday, January 4, at 3 p.m. If the 20 below zero temperature credited to Stroudsburg is adopted as official, it could be the lowest in six years. The old modern mark was 13 below zero on Jan. 9, 1962.

The record low for Stroudsburg was 36 below zero on Feb. 5, 1943.

The ever lengthening cold spell continues to put a drain on oil, gas and electric supplies, as heating plants continue to work overtime to combat the elements.

The most intense cold apparently clung to the valleys early Friday morning, as among the highest temperatures reported was a modest five degrees below zero at Camelback ski area.

Koehler Field House — product of study, imagination

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on the new Koehler Field House at East Stroudsburg State College.)

By PETE GRADY
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — The lives of the ancient Greeks revolved around gymnastics. The lives of the Physical and Health Education majors at East Stroudsburg State College revolve around the new multi-million dollar Koehler Field House. It's their home away from home.

It's a dream house come true for Dr. Frank Sills, head of the Physical and Health Education Department at ESSC. He had his homework cut out for him in the research and design stage of his pet project.

He canvassed all but two of the "Big Ten" mid-western universities in seeking fresh ideas for the field house. Other department faculty members toured Eastern colleges and universities, including the Ivy League circuit and the two service academies, West Point and Annapolis.

"We were looking for special features," Dr. Sills said.

Special features
Where did the schools put the main arena (the gym) in their field houses? Seating capacity? Electrically operated grandstands versus portable grandstands? Office space? Dressing rooms? Equipment storage rooms? Always keeping in mind the utility of space, preserving it in function and design down to the last square inch.

The questions pyramided up over years of planning and design. To answer them took time, travel, paper work, endless phone calls and money.

In 1965 the General State Authority received bids for the construction of the field house. The project was designed by Rinker, Kiefer and Rake, Stroudsburg architects and engineers under a construction allocation of 2,250,000.

Estimated costs for the "instructional multiple use" building range from $2.5 million to three million dollars.

The field house blends functional design and utilization of space into every nook and cranny of the huge three-unit complex.

Center unit
The center unit bridges the arena and the Natatorium and its second floor complement of classrooms and rooms devoted to sports and exercise and therapy.

The center unit comprises the foyer, three faculty conference rooms, a main conference room that can house up to 6 persons, two public offices and 16 offices for various faculty officials and a large central supply room with a service elevator for the adjoining second floor complex.

"The independence of the field house allows for good traffic control of both classes and spectators ports, it also established a fine traffic pattern," Dr. Sills stated in his airy well-lighted office.

"The faculty has privacy," Dr. Sills said. "There is ample access to the offices but enough control where faculty working in their offices can enjoy privacy. In my office you can almost hear a pin drop at the height of a close basketball game in the main arena."

Dr. Sills maintains that Koehler Field House is on the same level as those field houses in some state universities.

"When the wrestling coach from Oregon State saw our complex he turned green," Dr. Sills said.

More than 1,000 people came out for the first day of "Open House" of the new field house in August. Health and Physical Education majors made 52 trips and guided between 20 and 25 people per trip through the field house on the first day. About the same number of people were shown through the complex on "Homecoming Day."

The gymnasium was "sold out" when the Danish Gymnastics team put on its exhibition in the early fall.

Dr. Frank D. Sills, head of the Physical Education Department at East Stroudsburg State College, is pictured amid the massiveness of the main gymnasium in newly constructed Koehler Field House.

(Staff Photo by MacLeod)

Although the main arena has been tabbed by some local wags as a "drivable hangar," Dr. Sills points it out as a classic case of "form following function."

Four gymnasiums
The 300-foot by 157-foot main arena can be divided in four full-sized gyms.

Imagine a track event, a gymnastic team exhibition, a basketball game and a tennis match all going on at the same time under one roof! This is what functionalism, versatility and space can do when they are blended into a harmonious and exacting whole.

A one-eighth-mile grass-text indoor track, with a 220-yard straightaway surrounds the four-unit gym arena. Plans in the near future call for an indoor track team. Several meets are set for this winter.

The 2,500 seating capacity of the gym is expected to be increased to 3,300 within two or three years. Half of the seats are electrically operated while the other half are movable so that they can be cleared back for a track meet.

In case of bad weather one-third of the gym can be turned into a practice area for football, soccer or baseball teams. A total of 240 Mercury Vapor lights hang from the 42-foot-high ceiling. The lights take 10 minutes to reach their peak glow. The bulbs, which cost about $25 each, usually are good for about 10 years and last longer if not turned on and off frequently.

Other features of the air-

cooled but not air conditioned arena are a central public address system that plays music all over the complex, and room for five volleyball and seven badminton courts, without using the main basketball floor; an elevator that raises men to the top of the building and motorized cleaning equipment.

Swimming pool
On the other side of the central unit lies the Natatorium. The six-lane 75 by 42-foot pool is official but not olympic. But it is big enough to meet requirements for records.

Another feature of the pool is underwater windows where coaches and instructors can keep a close watch on a swimmer's progress. Seating capacity on one side of the pool is about 600 persons.

There are locker facilities for 2,800 students, 1,500 lockers for non-major students and 800 lockers for major students, also 113 lockers for the visiting team

False fire alarm after sonic boom

EAST STROUDSBURG — A loud boom, a cloud of vapor, and 40 Acme Hose Co. firemen on two trucks in below zero weather answered a false alarm Friday at 3:45 a.m.

What really happened was a sonic boom caused by a supersonic jet from United States Air Force Base, Westover, Mass., as it passed over the area on a training mission.

The speed of the plane set off a sonic boom, caused by a plane flying faster than the speed of sound, that echoed like an explosion.

Shortly after the boom someone mistook vapor from the cold weather for smoke and turned in the alarm. The vapor was coming from the area of Plant and Design Center on Lenox St., East Stroudsburg.

In a telephone conversation with Maj. Amy Smith, public information officer, Headquarters, Eighth Air Force, at Westover, the major said, "Yes, we did have aircraft over your area early Friday morning. They were flying a training mission, which is now completed. We (the Eighth Air Force) do not have any more training exercises involving aircraft in your area scheduled for the immediate future."

She expressed regret for the inconvenience to the people in the area.

Firms must report IRS dividends

STROUDSBURG — Taxpayers who receive dividend or interest income are required by law to give their tax account number to the organizations that pay the income, according to Seymour I. Friedman, District Director of Internal Revenue for Eastern Pennsylvania. For individual taxpayers, the tax account number is the Social Security number.

Business firms are required to report to IRS dividends or interest of $10 or more paid to anyone during a calendar year. The information returns, Forms 1099, are compared by computer with individual income tax returns to see if income is reported in the full amount.

Firms must also furnish a statement of total payments for the year to persons receiving dividends and interest amounting to $10 or more.

Leahy speaks to Lions Club

TANNERSVILLE — John Leahy of Crescent Lake, a retired post office employee, was the guest speaker at recent meeting of the Tannersville Lions Club.

Leahy told the Lions members in their Coral Reef Hotel meeting room that he is in the process of writing a book relating his 30 years experience in the postal department. He had worked his way up the ranks to become postal inspector, superintendent of postal service and director of personnel.

His address covered various phases of the post office work.

Mike Miller was like every other station and garage operator Friday—he should have had four hands to take care of all the stalled cars and others that just refused to start. Mike is shown above, applying the "jumper cable" to two cars that refused to start at the same time.

Tough day on garagemen

But, a guy can take just so much and Miller is pictured clutching his head in despair while surrounded by balky cars that frigid area temperatures struck silent Friday. Miller was pictured going through his paces at a service station at Third and McConnell streets in Stroudsburg.

Bids of $300,000 awarded for Tocks Island mapping

EAST STROUDSBURG — Two bids totalling nearly $300,000 were awarded to a Philadelphia firm for mapping properties within the Tocks Island Reservoir.

The bid award is the first money spending action for the 37-mile reservoir from Tocks Island to Port Jervis, N. Y.

Monies spent previously have been primarily for the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area, which is a Department of Interior Project. The dam and the lake, which will be created, is a United States Army Corps of Engineers project.

The two bids were awarded to Aero Survey Corp., Philadelphia.

One bid, for which the contract has already been awarded, is $198,142. This bid was let Dec. 5, the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers Office in East Stroudsburg, announced Friday.

The second bid, awarded January 4, totals $100,887. A Corps of Engineers spokesman said that the Philadelphia firm will map all of the properties from the dam site to Milford for the purpose of plotting property lines and separating individual parcels of land.

This same procedure was followed for the DWGNRA land before the Corps of Engineers began acquiring the land for the National Park Service.

The spokesman said that the contract term is for one year.

The most intense cold apparently clung to the valleys early Friday morning, as among the highest temperatures reported was a modest five degrees below zero at Camelback ski area.

Temperature also hovered around zero early this morning.

Local group in attendance at seminar

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Republican Chairman Dr. Evan C. Reese and assistants Frank Gochal and Edward Katz recently attended a seminar on voter registration in Holiday Inn Towne Motel, Harrisburg.

Clair Peilly of Bangor, former state representative, was also a member of the party attending the school.

Among those present at the sessions was William Johnson, administrative assistant to Gov. Shafer.

The purpose of the session was to increase Republican voter majority in Pennsylvania from 10,000 to 100,00 for the coming election year.

New stamps need heavy in county

STROUDSBURG — Postmasters Fred Rhodes of Stroudsburg and Stewart Marsh of East Stroudsburg, have announced that the two-dollar books of six cent stamps will be available today.

Rolls of 500 and 100 six cent stamps and books of 10 cent air mail stamps are also available, including post cards.

All types of stamped envelopes are on order but as yet are not available, the postmasters said.

There is a terrific demand right now and stocks are low, agreed the postmasters and said that they have been supplying the small associate offices in the area.

A shipment of a half million six-cent and a half million one-cent stamps is on the way from the sectional center, added Marsh.

Rhodes said the high peak of sales reached 90,000 six-cent stamps and 80,000 one-cent stamps for the Stroudsburg office, and said that by Monday the demand will probably level off and stocks of stamps will be adequate.

Other features of the air-

cooled but not air conditioned arena are a central public address system that plays music all over the complex, and room for five volleyball and seven badminton courts, without using the main basketball floor; an elevator that raises men to the top of the building and motorized cleaning equipment.

Swimming pool
On the other side of the central unit lies the Natatorium. The six-lane 75 by 42-foot pool is official but not olympic. But it is big enough to meet requirements for records.

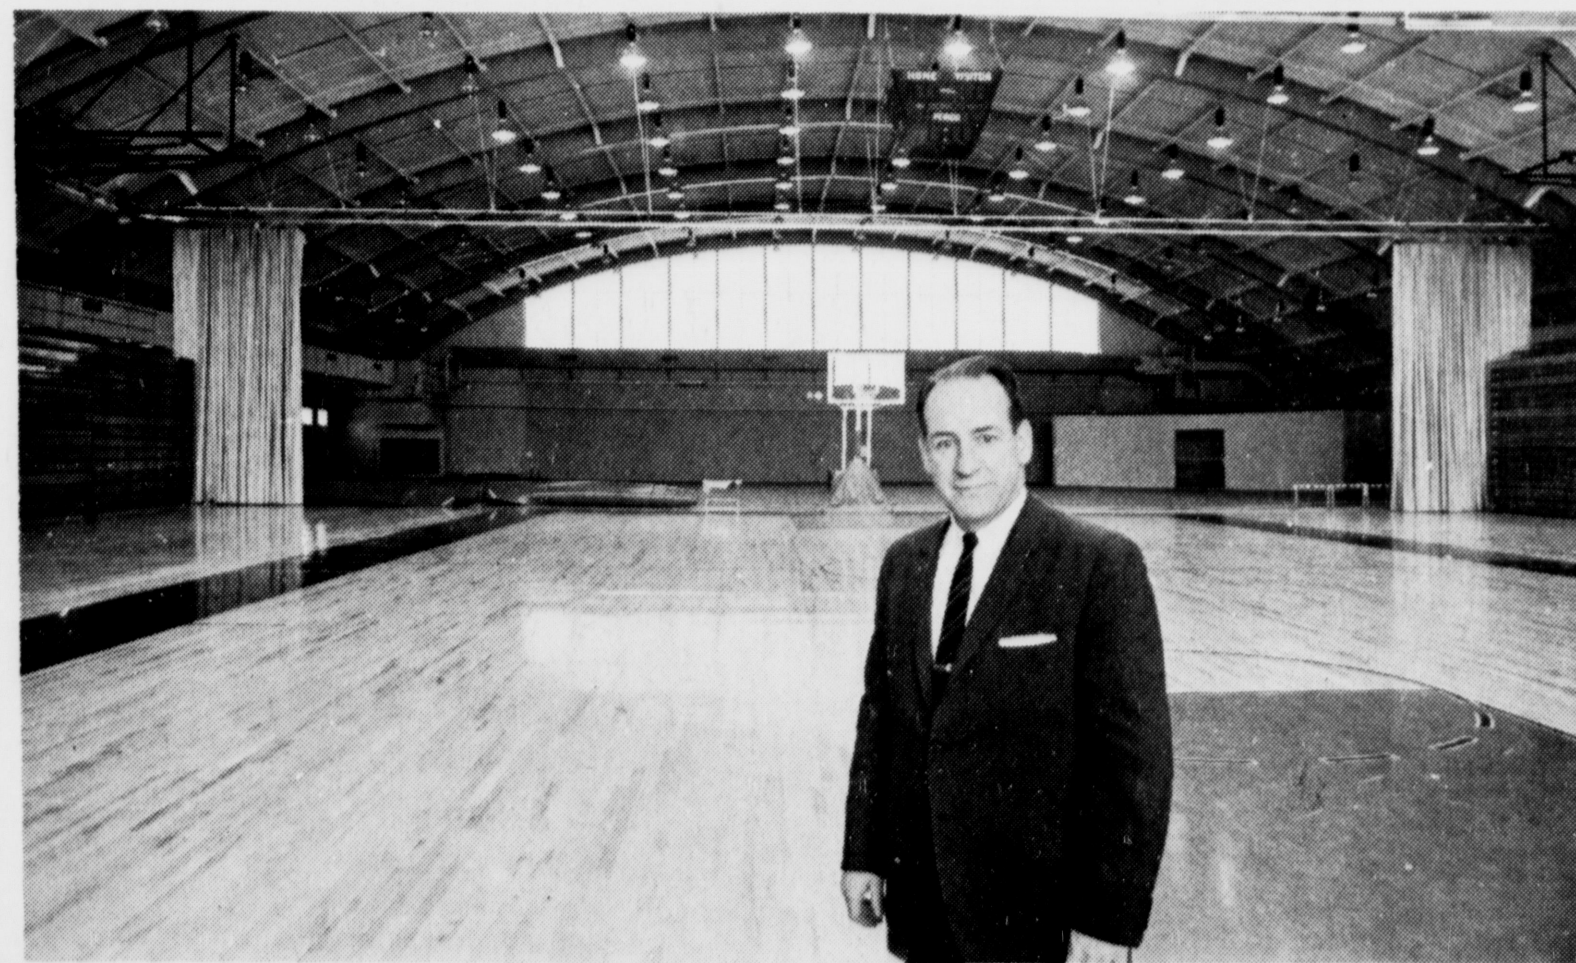

Another feature of the pool is underwater windows where coaches and instructors can keep a close watch on a swimmer's progress. Seating capacity on one side of the pool is about 500 persons.

There are locker facilities for 2,300 students, 1,500 lockers for non-major students and 800 lockers for major students, also 119 lockers for the visiting team, seven lockers for officials and 28 lockers for the instructional staff.

The second floor which surrounds the Natatorium on three sides is devoted to six student classrooms, two handball courts and a squash court, a wrestling room, dance studio and costume room, weight training room, physical therapy rooms, a human performance lab, consultation and seminar rooms and a large storage room.

Functional, versatile, with its double accent on space and youth, the Koehler Field House stands as a testimony to physical fitness and form following function.

Packers remain heavy favorites for second Super Bowl

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Green Bay remained a strong favorite over the Oakland Raiders Friday as the champions of the National Football League and the American Football League completed heavy work for Sunday's $3-million Super Bowl game in the Orange Bowl.

Both coaches Vince Lombardi of the Packers and John Rauch of the Raiders took time out from their training camps to visit press headquarters. Neither the Packers at Fort Lauderdale nor the Raiders at Boca Raton will come into town before game time Sunday.

Beautiful day
The weatherman expects "a beautiful day" for the game with temperatures in the 70s although some showers are expected to hit the area Saturday.

The weatherman predicted "a considerable amount of rain" for Saturday night and early Sunday, with clearing skies by noon Sunday and temperatures around 65-70.

"We like Green Bay weather better," Lombardi said with a grin, referring to the 13 below temperature for the NFL title game with Dallas on New Year's Eve.

A sellout crowd of 75,546 will watch in person while millions will follow the second test of strength between the two pro leagues on Columbia Broadcasting System radio and television. The Miami area is blacked out on television.

Game time is 3:05 p.m., EST.

Rauch, who led Oakland to its first title with a 13-1 season, said he was very pleased with the workouts of his team and, commented, "We are ready for the fight."

Lamonica recovered

The Raider coach said he would not name his starting line-up until Saturday but declared quarterback Daryle Lamonica had recovered from the virus attack of last week and defensive tackle Tom Keating, who suffered an ankle injury in the AFL title game with Houston, would be ready for action. Asked if he thought the Packers' position as two-touchdown favorites would act as an incentive to the Raiders, Rauch said, "They are favorites, I suppose because they are a very fine football team with all the weapons and a fantastic record of success. Being the underdog makes you feel you've got to fight a little bit harder to win. We have been the underdog before."

The Packers beat the Kansas City Chiefs 35-10 in last year's Super Bowl at Los Angeles.

Although the crowd in the Orange Bowl will be much larger than the 61,946 who watched last year in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the players' shares remain the same. Each winner will get $15,000 and each loser $7,500.

Arrangements have been made for extra pro-rata payments to reserve players on the basis of how many regular season games they have played.

The radio-television rights are worth $2.5 million compared to $2 million for the game last year.

Lombardi said he would start Anderson and Mercein against the Raiders. Ken Bowman will start at center. Both Travis Williams and Ben Wilson will see plenty of action in the backfield. "I think we are ready to play," Lombardi said. "No, the warm weather is no problem to us. Weather is all in your minds."

Nazareth nips Cavs, 49-45, in battle for L-N first place

NAZARETH — Nazareth took over sole possession of first place in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division Friday night with a hard-earned 49-45 win over East Stroudsburg.

Leading 37-32 at the end of three periods the Eagles scored five straight points to start the final period and open a 10-point spread, 42-32.

But with John Hood, Steve Nauman and Tom Kishpaugh each contributing four clutch points the Cavaliers whittled the gap to 47-45 with 2:55 left in the game.

Al Decker then hit a short jumper and Nazareth led 49-45 with 2:45 to play. Nazareth then went into a semi-freeze and although it lost the ball twice the Cavaliers were unable to take advantage. There was no further scoring in the final 150 seconds and Nazareth walked off the winner.

Eastburg's biggest lead was 11-7 late in the first period. Nazareth finally went in front 17-16 on field goals by Dale Wolfel and Tom Acker. The Cavs closed the gap to 21-20 at intermission but got no closer.

Wolfel paced the winners with 15 while Decker had 12 and Acker 10. John Hood was the lone Cavalier in double figures with 23.

Nazareth made it a clean sweep with a 78-48 romp.

Layden named Niagara coach

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Layden, a former Niagara University basketball player, was named varsity basketball coach of the Purple Eagles Friday.

His selection came one day after Jim Maloney, coach for 2 years, announced his resignation amid charges he had been hampered in recruiting and scheduling.

Layden, now coach at the Adelphi College Suffolk Branch on Long Island, was graduated from Niagara in 1955.

Slow start fatal to Stroudsburg

STROUDSBURG — A six-point first period led to Stroudsburg's downfall Friday night as the Mounties dropped a 79-65 Lehigh Valley League decision to Slatington.

The Mounties went into a man-to-man full court press in the final period and outscored the Slaters 29-20 but couldn't over come the early deficit.

Arley Williams regained his shooting eye for S-burg (-12 overall and 0-4 in the league) with a 29-point performance. He had four of the Mounties first period points, 10 in the second, one in the third, and 14 in the final.

Mike Reese and Bruce Hanke each contributed 23 points for the winners, now 2-2 in league play.

Cardinals remain unbeaten in L-N

NEW TRIPOLI — Pocono Mountain remained unbeaten in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Southern Division Friday night with an easy 72-56 rout of Northwestern.

The Cardinals used a zone defense for only the second time this season as they attempted to take advantage of a smaller playing floor.

A key man in the zone was Ed Horn who limited the Wildcats' top scorer Bill Stoudt to nine points. Stoudt collected only five points while Horn was in the game.

Pocono Mountain had a slim 12-9 first period lead as it also had trouble getting accustomed to the floor. But in the middle two periods the Cards had a 43-27 advantage.

John Gantzorn led a trio of winners in double figures with 19 points, 11 from the foul line. Gary Kirkwood had 16 points and 13 rebounds while Al Vican netted 15 points.

The Cards hit on 28 of 79 shots from the floor and out rebounded the Wildcats, 38 to 26.

'Hot' Slaters rip Pen Argyl

PEN ARGYL — Bangor high hit on 50 per cent of its shots from the floor Friday night in gaining a 73-54 Lehigh-Northampton Northern Division decision over Pen Argyl.

Frank Scagliotta, the Slaters top scorer got into early foul trouble and fouled out after scoring only three points. But John Swope, Brad Farino and Ridgely Hughes picked up the slack.

Bangor (10-1 overall and 2-1 in the L-N) never trailed after Swope's two-pointer gave it a 9-8 lead. For the night the Slaters hit on 27 of 54 shots. Swope was 7 for 1, Farino, 6 for 9 and Hughes, 5 for 6.

Pen Argyl on the other hand had one of its poorest nights as it made only 13 of 50 attempts. In the first half the Knights had only five field goals, all by Bob Parsons.

Swope led a quartet of winners in double figures with 21. Farino added 18, Hughes 12 and Kim Bellis 10. Bob

Thar she blows

To the spectator in the centerfield bleachers, the most majestic sight in all the spectrum of sports is Willis Mays going back for a long one.

To the undergrad, it is O. J. Simpson turning the corner and jelling for the end zone. The man with the cigar might hold out for Dempsey getting up off the floor or the first row of seats to knock out Luis Firpo, the giant Argentinian. A man with a gun might want a 16-point buck or an ermine-wrapped polar bear in his crosshairs.

But they all pale into inconsequence alongside the sight of a 75-to-100-ton, seagoing animal, the only remaining relic from man's prehistoric past, breaching out of the sea, a creature so unbelievable you half expect to see a pterodactyl flying over it.

You don't have to stand in line at a ticket window to see the great Pacific gray whale. You don't have to see a scalper, or have pull at city hall, or need a press pass. You can see it from shore if your eyes are good enough.

For, once a year, the most incredible story in marine history flows right past Los Angeles' shores in the great 6,000-mile migration of the Pacific gray from the Bering Sea to the shores of Mexico, and hardly anybody looks up. People who would crawl through barbed wire to see some political or TV cowboy, won't even glance seaward to see the mightiest creatures in all of history.

An elephant would be a house pet to the great gray whale. A dinosaur would be something to fetch the paper. They have been mistaken for islands by lookouts in the crosshairs of the great sailing vessels. They have been depthbombed as subs in war by low-flying aircraft.

6000-Mile adventure

They have been saved from the brink of extinction by their own elusivity and the discovery of petroleum. At one time, a whaling fleet of 1,000 ships, whose long boats, manned by eye-patched scoundrels and demented, one-legged sea captains, have been immortalized in Herman Melville's all but wiped out breed. Impunity than he can kill a whale.

Their annual migration southward to the breeding grounds of the warm-water lagoons of Mexico is a 6,000-mile adventure and peristrewn trek that makes the covered-wagon era look like a Sunday drive. Killer whales harry them, barnacles fasten onto them, they have to dodge ships, ice floes, driftwood and people.

They navigate by shoreline. They communicate in mysterious, subsonic language in a code no cryptographer can crack. They breach, i.e., soar full-length out of the water from time to time, to see whether those lights off to the left are San Francisco or San Diego.

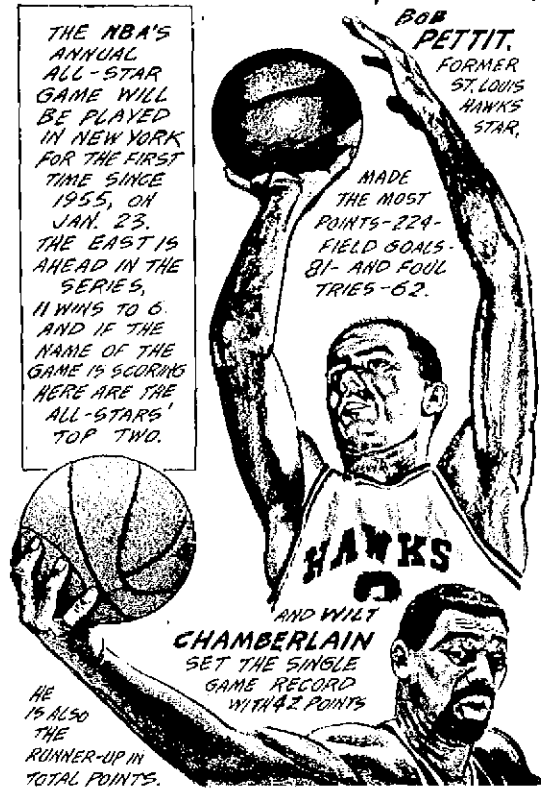

The females are on such a tight timetable that they usually dash down first. They must reach Mexico on their due date like a pregnant housewife making the delivery room before the pains are too close together. Imagine, if you will, a wife saying to her husband, "Darling, my time has come" and his answering, "Well, get your hat, we've got 8,000 miles to go."

The grays are not toothed mammals. They strain their food through a thick of bristles that hang down in their mouths like upside-down toothbrushes and, each year, they seem to move farther seaward as the inhospitable land refuse slopes over into the shore break. It would seem as if the grays have no stomach for the current cacophony of orange peels, chewing gum wrappers, lettuce and potato salad leftovers, beer cans, surfboards, rubbery boots, and soggy Kleenex—man's bounty to the sea in return for its bounty to him.

I went spying on these 20th century Leviathans from the Goodyear blimp whose shadow in the sea was scarcely larger than they were. With his was Clark Cameron, executive director of the newly-formed American Cetacean Society which hopes to fire a dart microphone into a whale this year which will broadcast his comings and goings and impart, among other things, information as to how his grossly enlarged heart (some of 19 feet in length) can withstand soundings to depths that would buckle submarine plates. The ACS hopes to eavesdrop on the communal life of the great whale pods in transit.

Man has much to learn from these greatest of all creates of all ages, and it is to be hoped that man will realize the great whale is more valuable to him alive than dead, and that even Captain Ahab would go hunting Moby Dick with tripod and telemeter today, not harpoon and bale, and bring back not his heart, but his heartbeat.

Wolman turns down money from friends

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Jerry Wolman, principal owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, won't accept the money friends are raising to help him out of his present financial problems.

Friends in Wolman's home town of Shenandoah announced a drive last Saturday to raise $5 million for the financially beset Wolman.

But Mrs. Wilma Robel, who was coordinating the drive, announced Friday that Wolman told her to send it all back.

"He said he couldn't live with himself if he accepted it," said Mrs. Robel, a friend of Wolman's in his native Shenandoah and wife of the Eagles' equipment manager.

Mrs. Robel said the drive had raised "over a million dollars," but said she would not give the exact amount.

Wolman, also a Washington-based builder, has admitted being in a financial bind because of a shortage of ready cash. He has filed for court protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, and must reveal in court next Friday how he proposed to pay off his creditors.

Mrs. Robel said Wolman would make a formal statement later on his position on the matter. "He said he couldn't explain how he felt, that he got to emotional over it," she said.

Bucknell AD succumbs

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Benton A. Kribbs, athletic director and former basketball coach at Bucknell University, died Friday at Lewisburg Evangelical Hospital.

Doctors said Kribbs, 50, who had been under treatment for a kidney ailment since last March, was stricken at his Lewisburg home. They attributed death to complications arising from kidney failure.

Kribbs, a native of Knox, Pa., and a 1933 graduate of Clarion State College, spent eight years in the high school coaching ranks before becoming head football, basketball, and baseball coach at his college alma mater in 1949.

He joined the Bucknell staff in 1952 as head basketball coach and directed the Bison cagers until he was named athletic director in 1962.

He is survived by his widow, Carol, and three sons, Robert, 27, William, 21, and John, 19. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

GB history in future, not the past

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Vince Lombardi, winner of three straight National Football League titles, said Thursday the history of his Green Bay Packers is in the future not the past.

"This is going to be a great football team in the next four years," said the Packer coach after a one-hour workout for Sunday's Super Bowl game with the Oakland Raiders at Miami's Orange Bowl.

"I'm sure we will have some retirements after this game, win, lose or draw," said Lombardi. "But we have more talent on this squad than ever. If we can fill in a few areas, bolster a few spots, we are going to be a great team. We lost some of our young people in stocking the new teams."

The Packers already are great enough to rate two-touchdown favorites over the American Football League champions in the Super Bowl game that will be watched by a sellout crowd of 75,546 fans and televised nationally.

Lombardi said he had two first-round choices in the college draft to be held Jan. 30 in New York. He said he also had one second, two thirds, two fourths and two fifth-round picks.

Cards satisfy Shannon

Cardinal 3rd baseman Mike Shannon, who slugged 12 homers for World Champion St. Louis Cardinals last season, signed his contract for 1968 season in St. Louis Friday. Shannon made a big switch from outfield to 3rd base last season, when Roger Maris was obtained. Cardinal Chief Scout Joe Monahan (L), who first signed Shannon to Cardinal contract, was on hand for the announcement.

Winter draft is scheduled for Jan. 27

NEW YORK (AP) — Professional baseball clubs will hold their 1968 winter draft of January high school graduates and eligible collegians on Jan. 27 in New York, baseball Commissioner William D. Eckert announced Tuesday.

The regular phase of the winter selections will be held first followed by the secondary phase.

Eligible for the regular phase are high schoolers graduating in January and collegians, who have finished their fourth year.

In the secondary phase, the clubs will pick players who have been drafted previously but who have not signed pro contracts. Clubs which drafted them will not be able to pick them again.

The Oakland Athletics will get the first pick in the regular draft followed by the New York Mets. The clubs select in inverse order of their finish in the 1967 season, alternating by leagues.

The draw for the secondary phase was arranged by drawing from a hat. In that draft Minnesota will be first followed by San Francisco.

Each of the 20 major league teams will be permitted one selection. Then each of the Class Triple A and Double A farms will get one pick.

ESSC hosts powerful Cheyney

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg State basketball Warriors will be out to plan giant killers for the second time in less than a month when they entertain the Cheyney Wolves tonight.

In the finals of the Pocono

Classic, the hoopsters pulled off a "miracle" win against a tall and highly rated University of Delaware team 85-78. Delaware's only loss in the eight previous games had been to Rutgers University. Cheyney will enter the game with only one loss to its record and has an equally tall team.

S-burg frosh capture 5th

STROUDSBURG — Three players were in double figures Friday as the Stroudsburg High freshman routed Statington, 75-32.

Coached by John Hinkle the Mounties have won five of their first seven outings. High scorers were Dave Cook, Mike Wells and Jeff Ramey with 18, 16 and 10 points in that order.

Kistler netted 11 to pace the losers.

The Warriors, 6-4, will enter the game with a four game winning streak and more promise than has been shown in recent years against Cheyney. To combat the Wolves' decided height advantage, Coach Ken Sisson can count on some inches of his own. Steve Guter and Bill Mainz both going 6' 6". Rich "Bucky" Spear, 6' 4", leaping Ben Kizer, 6' 2", and Fred Bantz, 6'2", gave Sisson a little depth to draw on four board strength.

Support also has to be drawn backcourt. Led by potential All American candidate Willie Shields, 6' 3", and the other Warrior co-captain John Grobely, ESSC has the potential to explode anytime. Together, the two have been scoring over 40 points a game while Shields also leads the team in rebounding with 12 a game. Grobely has been the leading ballhandler and has gotten close to six assists a game.

This will be ESSC's last game of the first semester and it is the best mid-season mark that they have had in many years.

JIM MURRAY

Thar she blows

To the spectator in the centerfield bleachers, the most majestic sight in all the spectrum of sports is Willis Mays going back for a long one.

To the undergrad, it is O. J. Simpson turning the corner and jetting for the end zone.

The man with the cigar might hold out for Dempsey getting up off the floor or the first row of seats to knock out Luis Firpo, the giant Argentinian. A man with a gun might want a 16-point buck or an ermine-wrapped polar bear in his crosshairs.

But they all pale into inconsequence alongside the sight of a 75-to-100-ton, seagoing animal, the only remaining relic from man's prehistoric past, breaching out of the sea, a creature so unbelievable you half-expect to see a pterodactyl flying cover over it.

You don't have to stand in line at a ticket window to see the great Pacific gray whale. You don't have to see a scalper, or have pull at city hall, or need a press pass. You can see it from shore if your eyes are good enough.

For, once a year, the most incredible story in marine history flows right past Los Angeles' shores in the great 6,000-mile migration of the Pacific gray from the Bering Sea to the shores of Mexico, and hardly anybody looks up. People who would crawl through barbed wire to see some political or TV cowboy, won't even glance seaward to see the mightiest creatures in all of history.

An elephant would be a house pet to the great gray whale. A dinosaur would be something to fetch the paper. They have been mistaken for islands by lookouts in the crossstreets of the great sailing vessels. They have been depthbombed as subs in war by low-flying aircraft.

6000-Mile adventure

They have been saved from the brink of extinction by their own elusivity and the discovery of petroleum. At one time, a whaling fleet of 1,000 ships, whose long boats, manned by eye-patched scoundrels and demented, one-legged sea captains, have been immortalized A man can kill his wife today with greater impunity than he can kill a whale.

Their annual migration southward to the breeding founts of the warm-water lagoons of Mexico is a 6,000-mile adventure and perilstrewn trek that makes the covered-wagon era look like a Sunday drive. Killer whales harry them, barnacles fasten onto them, they have to dodge ships, ice floes, driftwood and people.

They navigate by shoreline. They communicate in mysterious, subsonic language in a code no cryptographer can crack. They broach, i.e., soar full-length out of the water from time to time, to see whether those lights off to the left are San Francisco or San Diego.

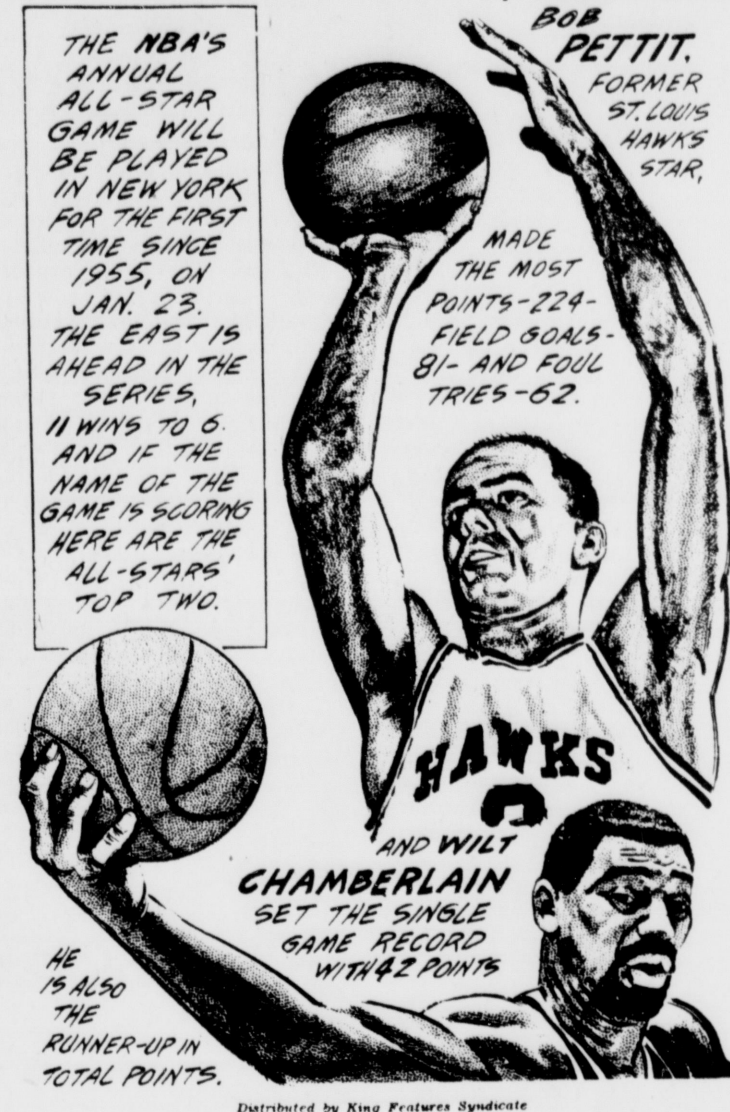

The females are on such a tight timetable that they usually dash down first. They must reach Mexico on their due date like a pregnant housewife making the delivery room before the pains are too close together. Imagine, if you will, a wife saying to her husband, "Darling, my time has come" and his answering, "Well, get your hat, we've got 6,000 miles to go."

The grays are not toothed mammals. They strain their food through a thicket of bristles that hang down in their mouths like upside-down toothbrushes and, each year, they seem to move farther seaward as the inhospitable land refuse slops over into the shore break. It would seem as if the grays have no stomach for the current cmucopia of orange peels, chewing gum wrappers, lettuce leaf and potato salad leftovers, beer cans, surfboards, rubber boots, and soggy Kleenex—man's bounty to the sea in return for its bounty to him.

EVINRUDE-SKEETER ... THE FAMILY SNOWMOBILE!

THREE NEW EVINRUDES FOR 1968—Evinrude Motors has unveiled three, all-new models for 1968. The industry's first efficient sound silencing system is standard on all units. A dual muffler system, aided by baffling within an enclosed engine compartment, reduces noise levels by 50 percent. The standard sports model (right) utilizes a new molded, polyurethane track for improved traction, flotation and resistance to wear. Wide track models, either manual or electric start, come standard with the industry's first reverse gear designed and engineered as original equipment.

Two types of plans

Bigger not always better

BY ANDY LANG

There are two kinds of families that want larger houses: (1) those who simply must have them because they require five or six bedrooms and (2) those who want them because they have a better living scheme in mind.

Bigger is not always synonymous with better. It is therefore important that an architect designing for group 2 devote special attention to the living areas of the house. Architect Lester Cohen has done just that in this latest house of the week.

While the rectangular shape is a practical matter in a small house, since unbroken roof lines are the least expensive, Cohen has also used it here, believing that it provides the best opportunity for incorporating rooms that flow into each other.

Thus, in this ranch house, we find the formal and informal living areas aligned to produce long expanses for easy living. There is no wasted hall space and the bedroom sizes are moderate. Although based on a center hall plan, there are no excess halls. Traffic flows around the living areas directly to all other areas. Four entrances to the house — front door, patio door, porch and garage entries — all see to that.

To the right of the center hall entry, the living room and the dining room total 34 feet, a fine size for luxury entertaining. The bay window area in the living room uses diamond-paned verticals for striking effect.

The dining room windows are clear-paneled fixed glass above, with awning-type openings below. Notable in this entire arrangement are the several walls offering unbroken spaces for furniture placement. This is an especially desirable feature in a room that is square, like the dining room. The arch from the hall and the one to the dining room give a feeling of greater spaciousness to the living room, so that it gains visually as well as actually.

The family room and the kitchen, placed in line in the same way as the living room and dining room, is 33 feet long. To this must be added the laundry-mud room and vestibule, adding nearly 8 feet to the length of this complex. The family room, with its window wall, corner fireplace and snack bar divider on the kitchen side, is what might be called an informal living room. The work space is easy to handle. Appliances and counters are just where the housewife wants them, and the proportion of the counter area to work zone is excellent. The lavatory and the laundry are most convenient, and while the plans call for a full basement, no housekeeper wants to be running up and down all the time. There are storage areas in the tool closet off the porch and the built-in cabinets in the laundry. With eight other closets, plus a master bedroom walk-in, storage is no problem in this house.

The three bedrooms are in the left wing. There is cross-ventilation in the master and second bedrooms. The third bedroom could be used as a den; its location is good for that. A stall shower bathroom is off the master bedroom, while the family bathroom is divided, with a guest vanity with double basins at the entrance, and the tub and water closet beyond.

Design Z-23 is long, low and contemporary, with the previously-mentioned unbroken roof lines and highlighted by a long planter, a pierced brick garage wall and a pierced roof overhang at the dining room end. Its square foot area of 1882, excluding the service section and garage, provides plenty of room for the family that wants lots of space but is not excessively large.

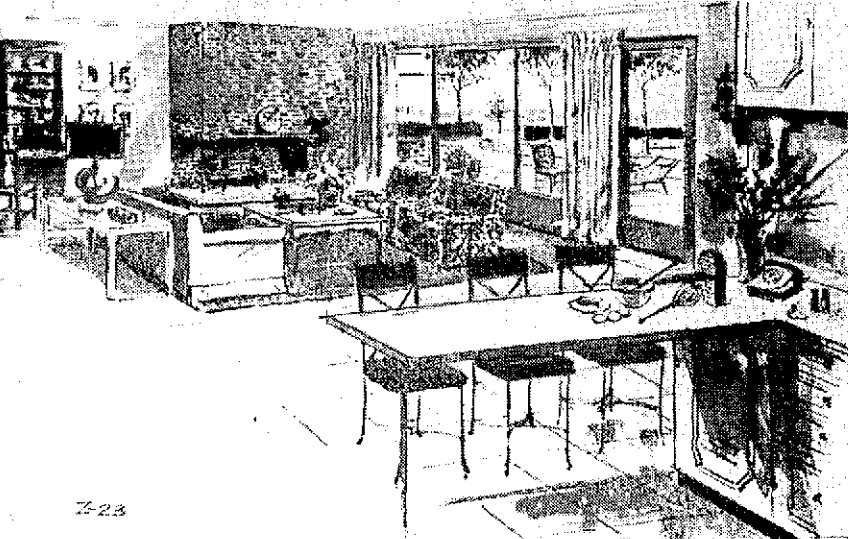

Green Thumb

CHENILLE PLANT IS SOMETHING GREAT — If you want a different type of house plant grow the chenille plant (Acalypha hispida). It has showy chenille-like spikes hanging from the leaf axils.

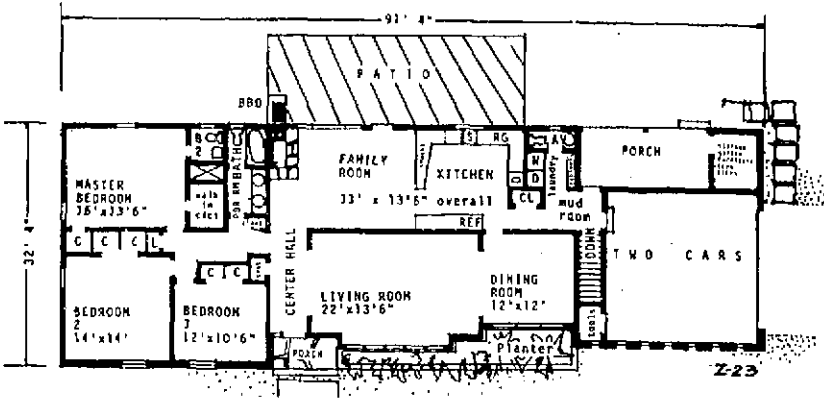

Plant likes bright window and a loose well-drained soil. Keep it moist at all times. Avoid overwatering as it will cause leaves to yellow and drop. You can start new plants from cuttings rooted in sand or plain tap water.

CONTEMPORARY RANCH—The crisp look of this three-bedroom house evolves from a harmonious combination of stone, brick and wood—its long roof lines, completely unbroken—its interesting windows—and the pierced brick garage wall.

FAMILY ROOM—Snack table is only separation between kitchen and fireplace family room, which have an over-all length of 33 feet. Door leads from family room to rear patio.

FLOOR PLANS—Deliberately designed to provide large formal and informal living areas, with the living room and dining room in an alignment similar to the family room and kitchen, this house utilizes all available space, skimping on unnecessary halls.

It is now more than a year since we have discussed the subject of leaky faucets. Our mail indicates that it requires more attention than that. Also quite evident is that women are showing a decided interest in tackling the problem. This could mean that (1) men know how to stop faucet leaks and don't need any advice or (2) men are less likely to admit they need help in handling such a basic maintenance chore or (3) women simply would rather do it themselves.

Whatever the reason, stopping a faucet from dripping can be accomplished effectively by any woman without help from a male member of the household. The one essential is that she be aware of how to turn off the water at the nearest shut-off valve or the main shut-off valve. Which, by the way, is something she should know in case of an emergency even if she never undertakes a faucet repair. Knowing how to turn off the water can prevent an ordinary pipe leak from turning into a flood.

The most common type of faucet leak is that occurring from the spout of a compression faucet, still in use in the large majority of sinks in the country, despite the inroads being made by single-lever and other types of modern faucets, some of which do not even use conventional washers.

When you have determined whether it is the hot or the cold water that is leaking, turn off the shut-off valve, place adhesive tape round the packing or cap nut just under the faucet handle. Using a flat-faced wrench, turn the nut counterclockwise. When the cap is loose, turn the handle in the same direction and when you turn on the water. Keep turning until the shaft or stem comes completely out of the faucet. At the lower end of the stem, you will find a washer, probably worn or chewed up, held in place by a round-headed screw. Using a screwdriver, remove the screw and dispose of the washer. Put a new one in its place, replace the part in the opposite order to which they are removed, turn on the water and the leak will be gone.

Question: We are having some plywood kitchen cabinets installed. We found that it was cheaper to use unfinished plywood. Besides, we felt that we would like to try our hand at finishing the cabinets, probably with a semigloss enamel. Can you give us some tips about this?

ANSWER: The first thing to do is to remove all the pulls, latches and other hardware on the outside of the cabinets. If you are careful, it will not be necessary to take off the inside hardware. No matter how smooth the plywood appears to be, it should be sanded again, using a fine grade of sandpaper and being sure to wipe off all grit after the sanding is completed.

Now examine the wood carefully and see whether there are any nail holes or cracks that have to be filled. Use a wood putty or some other type of crack filler. When the filler has hardened completely, sand it level with the surrounding surface. If any of the filler has shrunk, it may be necessary to apply a little more to that particular spot, again being sure to sand smooth.

Apply a coat of white enamel undercoat, preferably of the same brand as the semigloss.

Brown enters U.N. speech

NEW YORK (AP) — Black Power militant H. Rap Brown's miniwar with the New York police came to the attention of the United Nations on Thursday, adding a mite or so to its burdens as a global mediator. The Cuban mission formally protested to the United Nations that Wednesday's scuffle between Brown and a policeman on the mission's threshold was a "flagrant violation of the territorial integrity of Cuban soil."

A U.N. spokesman said the U.N. legal counsel, Constantin Stavropoulos of Greece, on Thursday morning "took the matter up with the U.S. mission."
